HOOVER CHARGES "SILLY"

Air Force Secretary Harold E. Talbott took exception this week to the transportation report of the Hoover Commission.

Asked about charges leveled at the Military Air Transport Service, the Secretary said a lot of the examples "are silly" and are "not examples of things we are doing regularly."

Pentagon Ups Housing Plans $100 Million; Prepares Public Works Bill For Action

Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson has given the green light for addition of $100 million to military family housing requests for the fiscal year beginning 1 July.

The action could mean construction of thousands of previously unscheduled quarters for Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps families.

It had been indicated earlier that the Defense Department family housing program for FY '56 would include plans for 27,500 units.

During hearings on the pay raise, some members of Congress urged that this program be accelerated.

The disclosure that earlier Pentagon plans have been revised upward by $100 million came this week before the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Reading a statement for Mr. Wilson, kept out of action by a cold, Deputy Defense Secretary Robert B. Anderson said that previous estimates, contained in President Eisenhower's defense budget, for a Public Works program of $1.9 billion for FY '56 now have modified to slightly over $2 billion.

The reason? Mr. Anderson said it results "primarily because an additional $100 million has been added to the original program for vitally needed military family housing."

The Public Works Bill will reach Con-

Get $60 Million May Payoff

Servicemen and their families this month will be paid $60 million more than they received in March, as a result of President Eisenhower's approval of the Career Incentive Act on 31 March.

The new pay raise went into effect on 1 April, along with increased incentive pay and an increased per diem rate—$9 to $12. Also approved in the measure was the new dislocation allowance, which is equal to one month's quarters allowance.

All Services told THE JOURNAL this week that personnel would receive the added money at the next pay day. Retired personnel will get the increased pay in their next checks.

The Career Incentive Act is estimated to cost $745 million per year for the Uniformed Services. That figures out to more than $60 million per month.

The rapid action of Finance officials in implementing the new legislation is certain to be a big morale booster throughout the Services. Careful preparations were made to speed the pay raise payments, and the quick Senate-House agreement on the measure permitted quick dissemination of necessary information to the field.

gress shortly after the Easter Recess.

Defense officials have made it known that they consider the housing shortage in all the Services, but most particularly the Air Force, the No. 1 morale problem in the Armed Forces.

Here are other late developments on

Hoover Group Asks Travel Allowance Cut, Limitations On MATS And MSTs Operations

Sweeping changes in military transportation facilities—affecting all Service families—have been recommended to the Congress by the Hoover Commission.

Charging "duplication, inefficiency and waste" in Federal traffic management, the Hoover group called for a "new look" in Defense Transportation. Major recommendations would:

- Reduce the present six-cent travel allowance.
- Place further restrictions on shipment of household goods.
- Require military personnel to foot the bill when shipping their private automobiles to overseas duty stations.
- Eliminate the Navy's Fleet Logistics Air Wings and the USAF Air Materiel Command's LOGAIR operation.
- Place all Service air transport under the control of MATS, and curtail MATS operations.
- "Drastically" reduce the number of administrative aircraft.
- Utilize more privately owned passenger ships for transportation of military personnel and their dependents.
- Provide "more predominately civilian administration of transportation."
- Eliminate competing commercial-type enterprises conducted by the Government in the Panama Canal Zone.
- Consolidate all such activities under a single civilian staff.

Recommendations to reduce the present six-cent mileage allowance were made by the Commission because increasing use of the allowance has "defeated passenger traffic management and pyramid transportation costs." The task force reported that "6-centers" may "hitchhike on the highways and aircraft, they form share-the-cost groups to travel

SECY TALBOTT WELCOMES HITCH- HIKERS

Hitch-hikers are welcome aboard the Secretary of the Air Force's plane.

Questioned by members of the Senate Military Appropriations Subcommittee about the Hoover Commission report on hitch-hikers, Secretary Harold E. Talbott said: "Every place I go in my Constellation I take hitch-hikers."

The Secretary said he did not believe that personnel were hitch-hiking flights to save the six-cent travel allowance.

Senator Milton R. Young (R-ND) told Mr. Talbott, "I think you should take those personnel with you." The Senator said he and his colleagues, however, have to have travel orders to ride military aircraft.

Mr. Talbott told the Senator: "I will let you hitch-hike with me."

by automobile, they may pinch on meals, sleep in terminals, and cadge on the gullible public. The purpose is, of course, to make money out of the allowances."

The Commission recommended that the mileage allowance "be retained but that the amount allowed per mile be reduced to a point where there is no profit in it." The group also asked that use of the allowance for autos be restricted to bona fide car owners who would be required to submit proof of ownership and possession.

Other recommendations would limit refund privileges on TRs (transportation requests) and BRs (tickets for meals and

Secretary Talbott Is "Shocked"; Urges 50,000 New Homes For Air Force Families

Air Force Secretary Harold E. Talbott wants 50,000 units of family housing for AF personnel "in a hurry."

He told the Senate Military Appropriations Subcommittee this week that "Housing is the most critical personnel problem in the Air Force today."

On his visits to bases throughout the world, Secretary Talbott said he is "constantly struck by either the complete lack of family housing or its poor quality. Last year I was shocked by the conditions in which our men and their families live in Morocco. In France near our new bases there is no family housing to speak of."

In company with Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R-Me), he said "a couple of weeks ago" he visited Presque Isle,

Maine, "where we have some of our air defense fighters stationed" and found the housing "deplorable." The Air Force Secretary said much of the housing "was built on an emergency basis back during World War II. Some of it is a more recent temporary type housing that was built out of plywood and wallboard."

"Neither of the housing areas," he added, "are fit for families to live in. Even our most experienced men will not stay with the Air Force if they are forced to live under such poor conditions."

Secretary Talbott told the Subcommittee, "I am personally in favor of any action that will permit us to get a considerable quantity of housing—say 50,000 units—in a hurry."

NG Expects 360,000 At Summer Training

The National Guard expects 360,000 officers and men to participate in two weeks of intensive field training this Summer and Fall.

The ninth annual field training of the National Guard will be under the general supervision of the Chief of the Continental Army Command. The actual training will be conducted by National Guard personnel assisted by active Army advisors on regular duty with Guard units.

Most of the Guard's 22 Infantry and 5 Armored divisions will train as complete units, even when their personnel is drawn from two or more States. Priority will be given to unit training, service practice firing, and the development of leadership in unit commanders and non-commissioned officers.

berths) and would compel the Services to make greater use of group troop movements.

The Commission also suggested that the Defense Secretary improve the system of packing, storing and transporting household goods and that he "place limitations on excessive shipments."

The group's task force said "horrible examples" of waste and carelessness in household goods shipments "could be multiplied almost to infinity." Three examples were cited: "packing one overshoe in a box more costly than the article, crates around junk tricycles, a huge box to house a 10-cent-store lamp and another for the paper shade."

Much of the crating of household goods "is unnecessarily elaborate," the group reported, "and higher grades of lumber are used than are necessary." The task force said it would be cheaper for the Government to provide furnished quarters "than the two-way hauls across the oceans to Europe and Asia."

Shipment of private passenger automobiles for Service personnel "is not only expensive in itself," the Commission reported, "but adds expense by the inflexibilities it imposes" on regular Government freight operations.

The Commission recommended that official autos in foreign countries be provided by Government pools and that "automobiles for personal use be rented from the pool at a reasonable rate." If a car is desired for personal use abroad by military or civilian personnel "the owner should pay for its transportation to and from his station overseas."

Military Air Transport

Reporting on the air transport of passengers and freight by the Defense Department, the Commission said the Services have engaged in "empire building" which has "undermined" MATS efforts to coordinate air passenger transport.

The Navy's Fleet Logistics Air Wings are flying routes which also are flown by MATS and the commercial air lines, the Commission said, and have "duplicated" many other MATS functions such as "maintenance, overhaul bases, communications facilities, and other attendant activities."

The Air Materiel Command's LOGAIR operation also overlaps MATS functions, the Commission reported. "Most, if not all, of its operations are largely of a nature which, if not now duplicated by MATS, can readily be coordinated within that command's existing functions." The services provided by LOGAIR "are superfluous," the report states.

The Commission says the United States does "not have the resources to maintain within the Military Establishment in time of peace all the transport planes and personnel which would be needed in time of war. The commercial airlines with their bases, equipment, and personnel constitute an air transport reserve for war. They should be encouraged to expand. To that end commercial-type air traffic for the Military Establishment should be assigned to the commercial airlines wherever possible."

The Commission recommended that the Defense Secretary "eliminate the duplicating air transport services within the Defense Department and merge the entire operation into MATS, except necessary administrative aircraft" which would "be drastically reduced."

As thus integrated, MATS peacetime operations would be "restricted and realistically limited to persons and cargo carefully evaluated as to necessity for military air transportation and, only after commercial carriers have been utilized to the maximum extent, should transportation on Service carriers be authorized."

Military Sea Transportation

Somewhat similar recommendations were made by the Commission with respect to the Navy-operated Military Sea Transportation Service.

"There cannot be two American merchant marines, one military and one civilian, operating independently and at times in competition with each other," the Commission declared.

MSTS freights, the group said, "are performing services which could be performed by private carriers." Attention also "should be given to maximum utilization" of privately owned passenger ships.

The Commission recommended that Government-owned tankers should be replaced with private ships and the Government vessels "mothballed." The group said the MSTS nucleus fleet should "be reduced in view of the actual services which private industry can render."

Panama Canal

Reporting on Federal activities in the Panama Canal Zone, the Commission said most of the problems which persist in the executive functions within the Zone "stem from the manner in which those activities are organized into two principal elements. The civilian function is personified by the Panama Canal Company and the military by the Caribbean Defense Command."

The Commission said the function of the Defense Command "should be solely to defend the canal." The report adds, "Despite the semblance of civilian leadership provided by the corporate structure, the company is completely dominated by the military personnel. The duplication of functions and wasteful management arise from this inner conflict."

Congress should "examine the competing commercial-type enterprises conducted by the Government in the Canal Zone," the Commission recommended, "and determine which of such competing enterprises should be eliminated." They then should "be consolidated under a single civilian staff."

Air flights by the Air Force and Navy into the Zone compete with available commercial air services and to a lesser extent with both Government and private shipping, the report states. And, through MSTS, the Federal Government "carries on competition with its own Panama Steamship Line." The Commission recommended that the three military Services "should fully utilize the Panama Line capacity."

No Criticism Of Military

In making the transportation report, the Commission said it was not intended as "a criticism of the ability and devotion of our military officers. These men are trained and dedicated to defending our country. They are not trained as accountants, traffic managers, or for other civilian-type activities. And as a generality they should not be diverted from their professional work to these purposes."

The Commission said there are "serious administrative problems and especially serious operating problems arising from the organizational relationship between the Department of Defense and the component Services."

The group recommended that "duplication of military and civilian personnel performing like functions be eliminated," that more attractive salaries be made available to civilian traffic personnel and that the Defense Secretary appoint a Director of Transportation "having no responsibilities except those pertaining to traffic and transportation."

At present there is a Director of Transportation and Communications (Mr. Earl B. Smith) in the office of the Assistant Defense Secretary for Supply and Logistics. His authority, the Commission task force states, "is entirely inadequate."

Under the Commission's recommendations the Director would be given authority "to direct the traffic management activities, passenger and freight, in all the military Services, including the coordination and consolidation of functions and facilities." He would report to and be subject only to the overriding authority of the Assistant Defense Secretary (S&L).

The transportation study was made by a task force headed by Mr. Perry M. Shoemaker, President of the Lackawanna Railroad, and including other top industrialists. No military personnel served with the group in any capacity.

The 12-member Commission on Organization of the Executive Branch of the Government, which made the final recommendations, is headed by former President Herbert Hoover. Other members are: Attorney General Herbert Brownell, Jr.; former Postmaster General James A. Farley; Director of Defense Mobilization Arthur S. Flemming; Senator John L. McClellan (D-Ark); Ambassador to the Philippines under Homer Ferguson; Robert G. Storey, member of law firm of Storey, Armstrong and Steger; Representative Clarence J. Brown (R-Ohio); Representative Chet Holifield (D-Calif.); former Ambassador to Great Britain Joseph P. Kennedy; Sidney A. Mitchell, former member Bonbright & Co., Inc.; and Solomon C. Hollister, Dean of the College of Engineering at Cornell University.

NUCLEAR CLASSWORK

Nuclear weapons progress is forcing major curricula changes at top Service schools. For a report on this situation at the Army War College, Carlisle Barracks, Pa., turn to page 939.

Contract Termination

George Washington University is holding a seminar on 15 and 16 April in the Lisner Auditorium on the problems arising from the terminations of military contracts.

Mr. T. Alfred Pilsen, chief of the purchasing and contractual policy committee at the Pentagon, and Prof. Robert Pasley of Harvard, are among those who will discuss the history, the legal aspects, and the necessary changes for these regulations.

Pentagon Plans 10,000 Homes For Army Families; Barracks For 38,000 Troops

New homes for 10,000 Army families and new barracks for 38,000 troops are due to be constructed during fiscal 1956 under the Defense Department's new housing program.

Housing is "the Army's major problem," Acting Army Secretary Charles C. Finucane told the Senate Military Appropriations Subcommittee this week.

He said, "If the Congress looks kindly on the Secretary of Defense's five-year family housing program, the Army looks forward this coming fiscal year to the construction of 10,000 new homes for Army personnel." This compares with 850 which will be completed during the present fiscal year and is "an enormous improvement," Mr. Finucane said.

He told the Subcommittee also that the Army hopes "to complete an additional 38,000 permanent barracks spaces during FY 1956." Mr. Finucane assured the Senate group that the Army "has a positive program for the rapid development of new permanent-type barracks for our permanent stations." He added that, while it might seem desirable to devote all of the new buildings to the needs of specific posts, there are similar conditions at other Army stations and "fairness" dictates that available funds for new barracks be divided as equitably as possible to eliminate "the most inadequate conditions."

The Pentagon construction program, which is due to be presented to Congress about 18 April, also includes funds for religious, welfare and morale facilities "to improve living conditions of military personnel and their dependents," Mr. Finucane said.

By 30 June of this year, he told the Subcommittee, the Army will have completed permanent housing for 195,000 troops in the Continental U. S. This is 55 per cent of Army requirements for housing the currently authorized long range Army strength.

SecNav Cracks Hoover Food Report Released To Magazine Before The Pentagon

Navy Secretary Charles S. Thomas, obviously displeased at the method of release, has branded as false certain statements made in a forthcoming Hoover Commission report on food waste in the Services.

He told an audience, composed of members of the Women's National Republican Club in New York City this week, that the Navy had been denied access to the report before it was made public in a Reader's Digest article.

Hoover Commission officials declined to say how the Digest got the report before the Services.

The Navy Chief assailed the article as carrying "nothing but horrible examples." Pointing to extracts which reported that sailors were "now eating beef, cheese and bacon sited in 1948," and that the Army had sent sugar from New York to a Schenectady depot for reshipment for use in New York, he charged that the implication was that this was typical of the way the Services are now being run.

"That is not true, and I will guarantee that," he emphasized. "They take cases that happened before this Administration and never indicate they were not the fault of this Administration."

Defense Dept. Eases Army Manpower Cut But Objectives Will Remain Unchanged

The Defense Department — apparently concerned over effects on combat readiness, economy and uninterrupted continuation of the draft — has given the Army authority to delay achievement of reduced manpower targets.

This does not mean, however, that the Army will be allowed additional manpower for the long haul. That is not in the Pentagon cards at present.

Previously announced Army manpower goals were 1,100,000 for the end of the current fiscal year and 1,025,000 by the end of FY '56.

Testifying before the Senate Appropriations Committee this week in behalf of Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson, Deputy Defense Secretary Robert B. Anderson revealed the new change in Army manpower plans.

He said the new target end-strength for FY '55 is 1,102,000, compared with a present force of about 1,250,000. Mr. Anderson added that the FY '55 goal "may be reached a month or two later in order that the reductions can be effected in an orderly manner."

The tip-off that the Army had been given some flexibility in reaching the lowered manpower levels came in the May draft call. It was for 10,000.

This was an increase of 2000 over the April call. It was surprising in that most observers, cognizant of unexpected heavy Army enlistment in January and a continuing good reenlistment rate, expected no increase over the 8000 call. A cut to 5000 was seen as more likely.

Presumably, the Defense Department was faced with two alternatives:

1. It could stick to the previous target of 1,100,000 by 30 June (actually requiring the Army to cut below this figure to make certain it was attained) and cut the draft to 5000 or even eliminate it for a month or two, or

2. The Defense Department could permit the reduction to be made over a longer period of time, preventing additional "early out" discharges and permitting an orderly flow of inductees from Selective Service.

The second course was chosen, but as of this moment with no intention to ease the manpower cutbacks in the Army through FY '56.

100 Units For Gary AFB

Contracts to make architectural and engineering designs for a 100-unit housing project at Gary AFB, Tex., have been signed by O'Neal Ford, prominent San Antonio, Texas, architect, Col. Edward J. Hale, Wing commander, USAF, has announced. The 100 units will be permanent type dwellings include both single houses and duplex apartments. There will be 74 units for enlisted personnel and 26 units for officers. There will be two and three bedroom duplex apartments except for several three bedroom single houses.

The entire project will cost $1,341,000. The housing area will be built on the 60-acre site recently presented to the government by citizens of San Marcos. Land for the site, adjacent to the base, was purchased for approximately $12,000 raised by popular subscription through the Chamber of Commerce.

Bright Hopes For Gyro Families

The dependent housing picture is good and getting better for Gyroscope-bound 1st Infantry Division families in Germany as their future home at Ft. Riley, Kans., prepares for the stateside return of the Big Red One.

Lt. Col. Edward E. Mayer, G-1, revealed the 1st Div. has secured 50 sets of temporary quarters for use by Red One families who do not receive on-post quarters, during the few days between their arrival at Ft. Riley and the time they obtain off post housing. The quarters are equipped with refrigerators, stoves and minimum furniture.

A run-down of how division families will be settled after the move is complete reveals 77 permanent quarters, 65 temporary quarters, and 117 apartments in Wherry housing projects will be available to officers and their families.

Sergeants of the top two grades will occupy 161 permanent quarters, while 141 temporary quarters and 150 Wherry apartments will be available to all top-three-graders.

The G1 also said private rental rates are fair and within authorized allowances. At present, dependent families of the 10th Div., which will come to Germany to replace the 1st Div., occupy 413 houses and apartments in Manhattan, Kans., 683 in Junction City, Kans., and 230 in other surrounding communities. There is also a new trailer court with community facilities just off post.

The situation is expected to improve because the X Corps is deactivating and the Army General School is being relocated. As their personnel move out, Big Red One families will gain in the reallocation of quarters.

Colonel Mayer said individual 1st Div. personnel will be notified before they leave Germany whether or not government quarters will be available for them at Ft. Riley. Allocation of quarters, he said, would be on an equal basis for all increments, because families belonging to 10th Div. increments would be living in housing almost until their counterparts in the Big Red One arrive at Ft. Riley.

200 UNITS FOR OTIS

Plans have been told for construction of 200 units at Otis AFB, Mass., at a cost of up to $2 million—part of an $8 million construction project at the Falmouth base.

Housing Survey In France

Results of a recent housing survey in the Communications Zone here indicated that 40 percent of the houses on the French economy occupied by personnel and their families are adequate.

The survey, conducted throughout the Zone by officer-enlisted man teams, with the help of a 26-question check list, is necessarily somewhat a "matter of opinion" according to Maj. G. W. Scott, G1 Division, who tabulated and analyzed the results. He explained that each officer-EM team had 30 houses to survey—and that they were urged during their pre-survey briefing to judge each house objectively, comparing them to each other, but not to stateside standards.

Surveyors rated the houses on six main points—space adequacy for number of occupants; heating facilities compared to cost; bath and WC locations; space for heating and preparing meals; hot water and water system. These items were also considered with an eye to sanitary facilities and danger to health.

The percent of houses considered adequate varied widely according to locations, depending on the size of the city and the number of troops concentrated there. Paris, for instance, offers good housing possibilities, with a 69.6 per cent adequate rating, while Captieux, one of the lowest, had only 9 per cent of their houses considered adequate.

The command-wide average of 40 per cent is broken down by commands as follows: Advance Section, 24 per cent; Base Section, 39.6 per cent; Orleans, 55 per cent and Paris area, 69.6 per cent. The 300 rental guarantee units near Orleans (the only one so far completed) were excluded from this computation.

As a result of the command housing survey, subordinate commanders were required to evaluate the housing requirements at each installation and submit a "certificate of need" for additional rental guarantee units.

1655 units have been programmed and approved to date, 496 for Advance Section, 759 for Base Section, and 400 for Orleans. Additional units requested total 1164. 310 in Adsec, 530 in Base, 224 in Paris and Fontainebleau and 100 in Orleans. Of the 1655 units "programmed," only 300 units have been completed (near Orleans); in November 1954, 568 additional units were approved for negotiations with French contractors, but no construction has been accomplished yet.

Another result of the survey was the removal of houses with insufficient sanitary facilities from the US Army billeting officer's list. This would encourage the improvement of such housing units by the addition of heating systems, hot water heaters, or WC's, either by the landlord, the tenant, or through the co-operation of the two.

CONAD Tells Plans

Air Defense Command officials at Colorado Springs, Colo., headquarters have revealed plans for construction of 1,949 housing units at 68 different installations within the command.

Of the total, 1,515 family units will be located at 20 ADC Air Force bases. Contracts for these should be let by 1 August. The remainder will be constructed at Aircraft Control and Warning sites throughout the continental United States. The AC&W contracts will be let before 1 July.

Selection of living sites depended on the availability of community support near the AC&W locations. Whenever the presence of schools, churches and other required facilities made it practicable for family living that site was given preference.

Projected date for completion of the base housing runs from eight to ten months after construction contracts have been awarded. The AC&W housing is scheduled for completion in four to five months after contracts are awarded. The approximate costs of the housing includes roads utilities and other necessary facilities.

Total cost of the housing scheduled for location at Air Force bases amounts to more than $20,000,000. The amount allotted for spending on the AC&W locations is approximately $7,331,000.

The twenty ADC bases slated for housing are: Duluth and Minneapolis-St. Paul, Minnesota; Ent, Colorado; Geiger and Palme, Washington; Greater Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; Kinross and Wurtsmith, Michigan; McGhee-Tyson, Tennessee; Minot, North Dakota; New Castle, Del.; Niagara Falls and Suffolk County, New York; Otis, Massachusetts; Oxnard, California; Portland, Oregon; Presque Isle, Maine; Sioux City, Iowa; Truax, Wisconsin; and Youngstown, Ohio.

Construction is planned for AC&W stations at Syracuse, Lockport, Montauk, Watertown and Saratoga, New York; Highlands and Palermo, New Jersey; North Truro, Massachusetts; North Bend and Condon, Oregon; St. Albans, Vermont; Calumet, Empire, Port Austin, Sault Sainte Marie and Ft. Custer, Michigan; Wadena and Chandler, Minnesota; Antigo, Williams Bay and Osceola, Wisconsin.

General Bolte Lauds Rifleman In Farewell

GENERAL Charles L. Bolté, USA, Vice Chief of Staff, retires on 30 April. With this event obviously in mind, he concluded an address on Sunday, 3 April, to a National Jewish Welfare Board audience in Los Angeles, as follows:

"I cannot close without paying profound tribute to the front-line rifleman, so few in numbers when compared to the millions who serve their country in the armed forces. I do not minimize either the essentiality or the tremendous service of the individuals, troops, and facilities which have raised, housed, supplied, trained, administered, and transported the vast numbers of troops that have been needed in the past and employed across the world. Often the risks and dangers on the seas, in the air, and on a home station have flared into costly reality. Grim discomfort and death are not confined solely to the battlefield on land.

"But, day in and day out, for sheer and bitter desperation of survival to fight and win; for dogged perseverance, transcendent courage, and sacrifice of self, for service to his fellows, his outfit, and his company; no one individual merits more the deep and unqualified tribute of his nation than does the foxhole rifleman.

"Men, not weapons, make war and peace. Men, not machines, win or lose battles. It is a delusion to be avoided at all costs to think that we can win a war cheaply—without having to come to the deathgrip with the enemy. If a war is to be won, the root and source of the enemy's threat and of the hostile action must be seized and destroyed. It is men, men with machines and weapons to be sure; but in the last analysis, men who accomplish these things. It is men who win a war. And, in planning for the future, we must never lose sight of the fact that our finest weapons are only as good as the hearts of the men who use them."

Gen. Shepherd Reveals Plan To Switch Elements of 3d MAW To West Coast

Elements of the 3d Marine Air Wing, now based at Miami, Fla., will be moved to the West Coast this year.

General Lemuel C. Shepherd, jr., USMC, Commandant of the Marine Corps, made the disclosure this week before the Senate Military Appropriations Subcommittee.

He said units of the 3d MAW will go to the West Coast "to bring into balance the air component teamed with the 1st Marine Division."

The 1st Division and the 1st Marine Air Wing, both of which have been in Korea since 1950, are being deployed from static defensive positions there to new locations where, General Shepherd said, "their readiness and flexibility may be fully realized in the event of a sudden crisis."

The 1st Division is moving to Camp Pendleton, Calif. The Marine Commandant said the "bulk" of the 1st Wing "will move to Japan, although certain of its elements will be deployed to the United States and Hawaii."

Discussing the forthcoming cuts in Marine Corps strength, General Shepherd said "reductions of the magnitude with which we are confronted involve some sacrifice," but the Corps is "determined that the sacrifice will not be made in the readiness of our basic striking forces."

Most of the cut, he said, will be absorbed by disbanding some reinforcing combat and logistic type units and by reducing the manning levels of other supporting units.

The effect of the reductions, he said, "will be to diminish somewhat the staying power of our combat forces," because of reduced depth in personnel and supporting units.

General Shepherd told the Subcommittee that the Corps will have to withdraw the battalion landing team which has been serving in the Mediterranean aboard Navy vessels. It now appears, he said, that deployment of the 2d Division team in the Mediterranean "will have to be curtailed in Fiscal 1956, due to reductions in amphibious shipping."

Additional civilians will be employed by the Corps during the coming fiscal year, the Commandant said. The increase, he told the Senate group, is "to meet the new support requirements generated by the redeployment of a regimental combat team to Hawaii and the 1st Marine Division to the United States." Figures which he submitted show that the Corps will gain approximately 2,600 civilian workers during the fiscal year beginning 30 June.

OPPOSES CUT IN MILEAGE ALLOWANCE

One of the Hoover Commission members, Representative Chet Holifield (D-Calif.), has dissented from several recommended changes in Defense transportation made by that group.

"Abuses of military travel privileges should be corrected by administrative controls rather than by reducing the mileage allowance across the board," Congressman Holifield states. "If the allowance rate of six cents per mile is reasonable, all military personnel should not be penalized because some try to make a 'profit' by subjecting themselves to personal discomfort and inconveniences."

The Congressman, a member of the House Committee on Government Operations, also said "Discontinuance of Government transportation of automobiles overseas for military personnel and their dependents would present a serious morale factor." He said he doubts "the efficacy of a rental pool arrangement in many overseas stations. The Government would have to procure many additional vehicles under the proposed arrangement."

Representative Holifield said he has "reservations" about several other recommendations in the Commission's report partly because he is "not certain as to their meaning and effect."

Mr. Holifield also dissented from last month's report of the Hoover Commission attacking the military medical services and recommending changing family medical care to those who do not subscribe to the commercial health insurance policies suggested by the Commission.

ARMY EM PROMOTIONS WILL RISE

The Army has authorized 7650 NCO promotions for April, following a promotion blackout in March.

Although the ban on boosts to E-7 continues, the Army will permit 750 promotions to E-6, 4500 to E-5 and 2400 E-4 during April.

With the anticipated heavy loss of personnel in May and June, it may be anticipated that quotas will increase. There's a good chance the May promotions will be twice those of April.

Army Branch Vacancies Within New Ceilings

Army authorities said this week that an understrength remains in certain commissioned grades in the Artillery and Signal Corps.

It was emphasized that the Army will not be able to call any additional Reserve officers to active duty or to retain Reservists scheduled for separation in order to fill these vacancies.

The Army is hopeful that in branches where there is an overstrength a number of officers will express the desire for transfer to shortage areas.

The Artillery is seeking lieutenant colonels, majors, captains and first lieutenants, whose age does not exceed 39, 35, 31, and 28, respectively.

The Signal Corps wants colonels, lieutenant colonels, captains and first lieutenants.

A report earlier this year concerning these vacancies led some officers to believe that they would permit retention in active service of Artillery and Signal Corps officers due for separation.

Pentagon officials stress that these separations must be made to get the Army within required budget and manpower ceilings.

X Corps Closes Shop 27 April At Riley

The X Corps and X Corps Artillery headquarters, transferred five months ago from Korea to Fort Riley, Kans., will be inactivated 27 April.

Transfer of the Headquarters X Corps and Headquarters X Corps Artillery, on 25 Sept. 1954, involved no movement of personnel or equipment, and they have been maintained since at Fort Riley on a limited-strength basis.

Maj. Gen. John M. Lentz, USA, the Corps Commander, and his staff will have a key role in BIG BLAST III, Fifth Army command post exercise, to be held 23-24 April at Fort Riley.

Much in the news during early phases of the hostilities in Korea, when it functioned as a separate tactical command, the X Corps was one of the three U. S. Corps of the Eighth Army throughout most of the fighting there.

ARMY STATES FAR EAST DUTY POLICY; EMPHASIZES THAT KOREA IS TOP NEED

Army personnel in the U. S. who are planning to volunteer, enlist or reenlist for duty in Army Forces Far East or Eighth Army and expect that by so doing they will serve in Japan or Okinawa were cautioned this week that the major personnel requirement still remains in Korea. "The probability of initial assignment to Korea is very high," the Army said.

In June 1954, Army Forces Far East and Eighth Army announced that personnel arriving from the United States would be assigned in accordance with requirements regardless of the fact that an individual may have served previously in Korea. This policy is still firm.

Personnel requirements in Japan and Okinawa will still be filled by the voluntary reassignment of personnel after a minimum of 10 months' service in Korea; the number of personnel who may be transferred from Korea to Japan and Okinawa depends upon requirements.

The best interest of the service is the primary criterion in determining whether transfer will be approved.

Brig. Gen. McNamara Logex 55 Umpire Chief

Brig. Gen. Andrew T. McNamara, USA, has been named chief umpire for LOGEX-55, one of the largest peacetime logistical maneuvers in Army history, to be held 2-7 May at Ft. Lee, Va.

LOGEX-55 will train and test student officers from all the Army's technical and administrative schools in support operations. More than 5,000 students, umpires and support units will take part.

This year, for the first time in its seven-year history, LOGEX will be used to test a proposed new set of logistical concepts developed by the First Logistical Command, Ft. Bragg, N. C.

General McNamara is Chief of Storage and Distribution in the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics, Department of the Army.

Other Army officers who will hold key positions in the umpire staff are as follows:

Col. Charles I. Davis, from the Office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics; Lt. Col. John K. Haddick, Col. George H. Walker, and Lt. Col. Leonard L. Johnson, Headquarters Second Army, Ft. Meade, Md.; Col. Raymond W. Beggs, Lieutenant Colonel Clifford P. Holm, John H. Wagner and Otis A. Davis, Headquarters First Army, Governors Island, N. Y.; and Lieutenant Colonel Milton H. Jones, Kellie H. Moses and Ernest H. Lorenz, Headquarters Third Army, Ft. McPherson, Ga.

with IT&T signalling and communications systems for greater operating simplicity, safety, efficiency and economy.

With Federal's mobile train radio systems, compact transmitters and receivers in engines, cabooses, wayside stations, towers, give railroads instant communications with moving trains. Stations, engineers, conductors, towermen, yardmen can all be in touch with each other at any time to pass information and instructions. Passenger-car public address and entertainment systems are also provided by Federal Telephone and Radio Company.

A vital new development is the IT&T Sequence Switch Interlocking System for railroad signalling. Used by the Rock Island at Gresham, Ill., one of the most complex networks of rail lines in the world, one towerman controls the whole area merely by turning knobs on his control panel. This system, available now through Federal Telephone and Radio Company, a division of IT&T, provides quick automatic dependable route-setting—handling greater traffic faster and with full protection against conflicting train movements.

PIONEERS in the development of electrical and electronic telecommunication systems, IT&T and its divisions contribute every day to progress in our railroads and other industries. A wide range of products for industry, business and the home benefit from the skill, resources and facilities that have made IT&T a great American trademark.

Closed-circuit TV systems, manufactured by Farnsworth Electronics Company, division of IT&T, use television to provide eyes for yard operators, inspectors, clerks. With cameras located at important yard points a clear visual picture of conditions is transmitted to tower or station receivers.

USMC's Tuition Aid Funds Running Low; Hqs. Will Ask Congress For More Money

More money for off-duty education will have to be requested by the Marine Corps if the program continues to expand at present rates.

Headquarters Education and Information officials report that the request will be made for funds to supplement the fiscal year 1956 budget now being considered by Congress. It was stated that all available fiscal year 1955 funds for educational purposes are expected to be expended by June.

The original budget request for FY '56, approximately $60,000, is the same amount as that granted for fiscal '55. Since the submission of the FY '56 request for funds, however, several new factors have developed which will make it mandatory for the Corps to seek a supplemental appropriation if Marines are not to be turned from the program.

The return of the 1st Marine Division from the Far East to the West Coast, is bound to increase the number of enrollees in the plan.

But even without the return of the 1st Division to the States, Education officers note, there would still be a requirement for more funds. It is pointed out that there has been nearly a 200 per cent increase in the number of participants from FY '54 to FY '55, and that progressively larger numbers are expected to take advantage of the educational opportunity. In fiscal '54, 546 entered the Tuition Aid Program; in fiscal '55, in the first two semester quarters, 976 were already signed for courses.

One of the primary reasons for the jump is that the mechanics of enrollment have been simplified to make it easier for personnel to enter the program. This was made possible when control of education funds recently was decentralized from Headquarters to local commands.

In addition to the rising cost of education, another reason why the Marine Corps will be required to ask for more money, is the fact that more officers are now eligible for participation in the plan. A rider attached to the 1954 Appropriation Bill, limiting officer participation to 1st lieutenants and below, was eliminated from the FY'55 budget.

Under the Tuition Aid Program, the Marine Corps is authorized to pay 3/4ths of the tuition costs, not exceeding $7.50 per semester hour (or $5.00 per quarter hour) on the college level, or more than $22.50 per Carnegie unit for a high school level course. The individual adds the remaining amount from his own pocket.

While the Corps is interested in the education of Reservists, Headquarters says, the weight of interest is in Regulars who intend to make careers in the Service. Provided there is a relationship between the course and the individual's career, there is no restriction of subject matter. However, Headquarters discourages a man carrying a schedule which is deemed detrimental to his normal duties.

The sole purpose of the Tuition Aid Program, Education officials state, is to build a more effective force of combat Marines. The program is keyed to the belief that given a man of certain ability, and by adding certain educational attainments, the Corps will be able to develop a Marine better equipped to assume the duties of leadership.

At present, Marines are enrolled at 72 universities, colleges, junior colleges and high schools in the continental United States, Hawaii and the Far East.

Enlisted personnel entering the program must have enough time remaining in an active duty status to complete any courses embarked upon. Commissioned officers, who generally take subjects of a technical nature, must agree to remain on active duty two years after the completion of a course.

The overall program is administered by Lt. Col. Leyton M. Rogers, USMC, Head, Education and Information Section, Personnel Department, at Marine Headquarters. Maj. H. E. Benn, USMCR, is Assistant to Colonel Rogers.

Those interested in information concerning the Tuition Aid Program are advised to contact their unit education officers. Details of the program for Regular and Reserve officers on active duty are contained in Marine Corps General Order 156.

Marines And National Rifle Association Set Up New Reserve Training Program

A new program for training Marine Corps Reservists has been developed by the Marine Corps and the National Rifle Association.

Involving volunteer Reservists and civilian marksmanship instructors, the plan provides an opportunity for former Marines, not affiliated with Organized Reserve units, to maintain or to increase their marksmanship proficiency under coaching of the NRA. Present plans call for using either the ranges of local NRA clubs, or those of Organized Marine Corps Reserve units.

Launched quietly on an experimental basis several months ago, details of the unique program were revealed by Maj. Gen. Joseph C. Burger, USMC, Director, Division of Reserve, Marine Corps Headquarters, and Maj. Gen. Merritt A. Edson, USMC-Ret., executive director of the NRA, at the Association's 84th annual meeting held last week in Washington, D. C.

A pilot unit, using the facilities of the National Capital Rifle and Pistol Club, 10 G Street, N. E., Washington, D. C., was established in January. Between 10 and 15 former enlisted Marines meet regularly to participate in marksmanship training. Among the volunteer coaches is Mr. Frank T. Parson, Jr., an Olympic team competitor and coach, and a director of the NRA.

An additional pilot unit, making use of Marine Corps Reserve facilities, soon will be set up. Col. J. R. Lanigan, USMC, Director, Fifth Marine Corps District, is in charge of the pilot program.

Maj. Gen. Burger

General Edson pointed out that the NRA was founded to promote and increase marksmanship training within the Armed Services and among civilians who might be called for service in times of emergency. "Our present military leaders," the General said, "have continually emphasized that the individual fighting man is still of utmost importance in modern warfare. We feel that here is a plan which could increase the training and fighting ability of civilians—and thus strengthen our Reserve Forces."

General Burger said the Marine Corps Reserve is "most interested" in the program, pointing out that it could provide a way for men with some military training to continue their proficiency in the basic weapon of the Corps. "If sufficient interest develops," the Marine Reserve Chief stated, "and additional units are established throughout the country, we plan to broaden the scope of the training program. We hope to establish mail matches between these volunteer units, and possibly, even establish shoulder-to-shoulder matches."

As drawn up by the Marine Corps and the NRA, the program is principally for veterans. Unit members will receive no pay, but regular participation constitutes belonging to the Organized Reserve and aids in reducing the length of military service obligations. In addition, regular members of the plan would qualify for retirement pay credit points, and qualify for promotion.

Ammunition and rifles for the program are supplied by the Marine Corps.

CEC WO Insignia—Warrant officers specially designated for duty in the Civil Engineer Corps are authorized to wear the CEC insignia in place of their present warrant specialty device. This change affects approximately 135 WO's whose designators are 749x (CEC machinist); 759x (CEC electrician); and 779x (CEC carpenter).

White Tropical Shirt—The collar of both the white and khaki tropical short-sleeve shirt will be changed from the present straight or shawl style to a regular notched collar. In addition, shoulder marks are prescribed in place of metal collar insignia on the white shirt. Breast insignia or ribbons may be prescribed on the white shirt when officers in command feel that they are appropriate. The Navy says that present style shirts may continue to be worn until a replacement is ordered or until stocks on hand are exhausted.

Alguillettes—Alguillettes will be furnished to aides and attaches at the expense of funds allotted to the flag or staff to which an individual is attached, rather than considered a personal expense. The alguillettes will remain in the custody of the organization providing them when an individual is reassigned.

Gray Gloves—In the future, gray gloves will be required as part of the Service Dress Blue uniform only when prescribed, rather than being mandatory as in the past.

Khaki Web Belt—Khaki web belts are now authorized with khaki uniforms. This change does away with present authorization for khaki cloth belts.

Medium-Weight Blue Overcoat—Women officers, as well as male officers, may now wear the medium-weight blue overcoat in place of the blue raincoat. Women officers are also permitted to wear large medals on the blue or white service uniform.

Miniature Medals—Present restrictions on the number of miniature medals or badges to be worn on appropriate uniforms will be stricken from Uniform Regulations.

Medals and Attachments—Regulations will be amended to permit locating attachments (battle stars, gold stars for second awards, etc.), to the wearer's left of center ribbon centerline, in cases where five medals are mounted on a single bar. This change was made in order to avoid concealing stars underneath the next overlapping medal of higher precedence.

Dungaree Rating Badge—A newly-developed blue, photo-printed rating badge is authorized for use on dungaree working uniforms.

White Socks—EM may wear white socks with the white undress uniform until 1 Jan. 1956.

Women Officers' Hat—Regulations will be changed to permit captains and commanders to wear an encircling one-quarter-inch band of gold piping on their hats.

Gen. Vidal Named Dep. Cmdr. For Reserve Affairs

Brig. Gen. Felix L. Vidal, USAFR, has been appointed Deputy Commander for Reserve Affairs, Continental Air Command, to succeed Brig. Gen. Robert E. Condon, USAFR, who is returning to inactive status.

General Vidal left the Regular Service in 1946 and was commissioned in the Reserve a year later. He assumed command of the 439th Fighter Wing (Res.) in 1952 and guided it to its present strength of more than 900 active Reservists.

Promoted to his present rank in April 1954, General Vidal commanded the 439th Fighter Wing until his return to active duty last month. Serving consecutively as Vice-Chairman and Chairman of Air Affairs for the Reserve Officers Association from 1952 until last month, General Vidal also was active as a member of the Air Force Association and participated in the formation of the Hoyt S. Vandenberg Squadron.

AF Restricts Early-Out Policy For EM

The Air Force no longer will authorize early discharge of airmen to accept cyclic employment.

This was authorized last May to permit airmen to take jobs which begin at certain periods of the year.

The Air Force said, however, it will still be possible for certain airmen to be discharged ahead of schedule to enter college.

Gen. Tunner Stresses NCO's Part in Build-Up

The important role of the non-commissioned officer in the build-up of the Air Force was stressed by Lt. Gen. William H. Tunner, Commander-in-Chief, U. S. Air Forces Europe, in addressing the 48 graduates of the NCO Academy at Freising, Germany.

"The NCO of today," General Tunner said, "must assume duties that heretofore were delegated only to commissioned grades."

"Experts have determined that 137 wings are the absolute minimum needed by the Air Force to accomplish its mission. The Air Force must practice the strictest personnel austerity in manning these wings lest the financial burden of supporting such a force to destroy the very economy and way of life we are pledged to protect."

Shift Three Colonels In Fifteenth Air Force

A three-way personnel shift, involving senior Fifteenth Air Force colonels, is announced at March AFB, Calif.

Col. John W. Norvell, USAF, Director of Personnel for SAC's largest "numbered" air force, has been enrolled in an upcoming class at the National War College. He has held his present post since June, 1953.

Slated to replace him is Col. Edward D. Edwards, USAF, Commander of the 99th Strategic Reconnaissance Wing, stationed at Fairchild AFB, Wash. He has commanded the B-36 equipped unit since its official re-designation two years ago. The organization was formerly known as the 111th SRW.

Moving to the northwest to assume command of the 99th, will be Col. Bryson R. Bailey, USAF, Deputy Director of Operations for the Fifteenth.

SAC Generals Present Awards To NCO's In Graduations At Three U. S. Academies

The Strategic Air Command's three stateside NCO academies 2 April graduated 180 master sergeants.

This eighth class of the stateside academies, plus the classes at SAC's 7th Air Division Academy, England, brings the total number of NCO's graduated to 2,622.

The leadership courses are designed to prepare NCOs for key SAC supervisory positions. Graduates are identified by a light blue band on their left epaulet.

Seven of the master sergeant graduates were honored at Saturday's exercises for outstanding achievement during the five and a half week courses. General officers were on hand at each of the ceremonies to present engraved desk pen sets to the honor graduates, engraved plaques to award winners, and diplomas to all graduates.

At the Fifteenth Air Force Academy, March AFB, Calif., Maj. Gen. John P. McConnell, USAF, SAC director of plans, made the graduation address and presented awards to: honor graduate M/Sgt. Raymond L. Wolfert, Forbes AFB; VISIT TEXAS A & M — General Nathan F. Twining, Chief of Staff, USAF, with Dr. David H. Morgan, President of Texas A & M; Col. John A. Way, FAS; and Col. Joe Davis, Commandant of School of Military Science. General Twining and other top military leaders were guests of the college during its annual observation of Military Day.

WINS SOLDIER'S MEDAL

M/Sgt. George W. Whitaker, Ellsworth AFB, S. D. recently was awarded the Soldier's Medal for risking his life in the rescue of an airman from the path of a moving airplane propeller last December.

Sergeant Whitaker's citation describing the incident stated in part: "During the process of starting an engine, a C-124 aircraft rolled forward directly towards an airman who was attempting to push a ground power unit from the path of the propeller. Unable to move the unit the airman was frozen to immobility by the oncoming propeller."

"With unusual presence of mind and complete disregard for his own safety, Sergeant Whitaker instantly seized the airman and threw him to safety. He then fought a fire, caused by the propeller hitting the starting unit, until the fire crew arrived."

Gens. Wood And Caldara Report to Motor Posts

Maj. Gen. Jack W. Wood, USAF, and Brig. Gen. Joseph D. Caldara, USAF, have reported for new assignments with the Office of The Inspector General, USAF, at Norton AFB, Calif., headed by Maj. Gen. Howard G. Bunker, USAF, Deputy Inspector General.

Maj. Gen. Jack W. Wood, formerly Director of Inspection Services, Office of The Inspector General, USAF, Headquarters, USAF, is Director of Readiness and Material Inspection succeeding General Bunker who became Deputy Inspector General on 1 March.

General Caldara, formerly Commander of the Third Air Division (Strategic Air Command), Guam, Marianas Islands, succeeds Brig. Gen. Richard J. O'Keefe, USAF, Director of Flight Safety Research, who has been named Deputy Director, Supply and Services, Deputy Chief of Staff, Material, Headquarters USAF.

Col. Westlake Takes Reserve Policy Post

Col. William Westlake, USAF, has been appointed Executive Secretary of the Air Force's Air Staff Committee on Air Force Reserve Policy.

The veteran pilot and newspaperman recently returned to the States after two years of duty in Greece and Turkey as Public Information Officer of Allied Land Forces, Southeastern Europe, and of the Sixth Allied Tactical Air Force, NATO's two youngest commands which have headquarters in Izmir, Turkey.

Brig. Gen. J. P. Henebry, USAFR, is chairman of the Committee on Air Force Reserve Policy. The Committee, composed of leading Air Force Regulars and Reserves, acts as advisor to the Secretary of the Air Force on Reserve policies and regulations.

Chapel Choir Contest

An Air Force-wide Chapel Choir Contest is open to choralliers in the U. S. and at overseas bases. Judging will be accomplished by means of tape recordings, first at command level and finally at Hqs USAF. Three winning choirs will be announced in July by Chaplain (Maj. Gen.) Charles I. Carpenter, Chief of Air Force Chaplains.

First Ground Work Underway at USAF Academy Site; Begin Structures in '56

The first construction equipment has moved into the site of the famed new $125,000,000 U.S. Air Force Academy north of Colorado Springs, Colo., to assist in obtaining information on soil and foundation conditions which will confront contractors building the Academy.

For more than a month earlier this year the Oklahoma Testing Laboratories of Oklahoma City, Okla., has had soil engineers running a variety of tests throughout the area where the runway, taxi strips, apron and other portions of the airfield are to be located. This organization is under contract to Skidmore, Owings and Merrill of Chicago, architects-engineers for the huge project.

The information resulting from these tests will be included in the specifications which will be in advertisements scheduled to go out in April for initial bids on the excavating and earthmoving for the airfield site, construction of certain utilities and the road system. The bids are expected to be awarded in May and construction will probably get under way in June.

8,800-ft. Runway

The airfield will include a runway 8,800 feet x 200 feet, sufficient aircraft hangars and maintenance facilities, parking area to take care of about 30 T-29 navigational trainers and administrative aircraft.

The Oklahoma Testing Laboratories dug seven large test pits, ranging from six to 30 feet deep, throughout the area to obtain complete information on the type of soil and the fill material available.

A Caterpillar D8 Tractor with bulldozer and a Cat DW10 Tractor-Scraper leased from L. H. Kilgore Construction Co. of Denver, were used by Oklahoma Testing Laboratories to dig the test pits. The 'dozer did the bulk of the work, but the DW10 was used extensively in the bigger pits to haul and windrow the material along the pit's edge so the hole could be backfilled more easily.

The pit entrances were so deep, the D8 would not only push load the DW10, but continue to push until the DW10 was completely clear of the soft sandy soil found in the pits. The use of the DW10 eliminated moving the dirt three times by the bulldozer in many instances.

Load Bearing Tests

After the pits were dug, a low-boy heavily loaded with sand bags, was driven into the bottom of the pit. Soils engineers used the heavy vehicle as support for instruments performing load bearing tests on the soil at various depths. In addition sieve analysis tests were run; tests to determine densities in place were conducted, and the California Bearing Ratio was determined to discover the type of flexible and non-flexible pavements best suited for this type of soil.

While this activity is going on in the pit, there is also work of a similar nature being conducted on top of the ground. Across U.S. Route 85-87 from the big 30-foot pit, six miles north of Colorado Springs, the D8, DW10, a Cat No. 12 Motor Grader and a Grace rubber-tired compactor were going about the business of giving the soils engineers compaction tests on the soils found in the area.

Besides the load bearing, density and granular tests taken in and about the pits, Oklahoma Testing Laboratories also performed five thousand feet of boring throughout the entire site to obtain soil samples.

Col. Stoltz Heads Agency

The Air Force Academy Construction Agency, under the direction of Col. Albert E. Stoltz, has been headquartered in Colorado Springs to supervise the planning, designing and construction of the Academy.

The AFACA officials estimate that the excavation and earthmoving on the airfield area, the road system and construction of some utilities will be completed by the end of this year. Structural work will be started early in 1956. It is estimated that approximately 1,000 people will be working on the project during 1955. At peak production, in about two years, there will be up to 5,000 employed on Air Academy construction. In most instances the prime contractor will be responsible for all labor, materials and supplies, according to AFACA officials.

More than 17,000 acres of land has been purchased for the Air Academy just north of Colorado Springs, where the climate and terrain has been judged ideally suited for this new institution which will rate with the older service schools—West Point and Annapolis.

Station Complement 5,000

The Air Academy, whose superintendent is Lt. Gen. Hubert R. Harmon, will have a student body of 2,600 cadets and an over-all personnel complement of about 5,000 when under full operations. The facilities will include the (1) cadet area which includes academic and athletic structures, living quarters and other necessary facilities such as a Chapel, PX, dispensary, theatre, etc.; (2) airfield; (3) maneuver area where the rudiments of infantry training will be part of the course; and (4) family housing area which includes single family dwellings to house dependents of key personnel.

The first class of 300 cadets will start sessions 1 July of this year at an interim site located at Lowry Field in Denver. Under present plans, the permanent Academy will be sufficiently complete to take care of the first three classes of cadets by the Fall of 1957.

Col. Stoltz

WORKING IN SIGHT OF PIKES PEAK this Caterpillar No. 12 Motor Grader mixes soil and water to prepare it for compaction tests being conducted on the U. S. Air Force Academy site. This portion of the soil contained optimum moisture content. On another portion of the test plot the soil was made dry of optimum and on a third section it was wet of optimum to get a full range of the moisture.

SALUTE CARSWELL

Carswell AFB, Tex., has been presented the Air Force's highest fire prevention award, the national 1954 Fire Prevention Week Contest Plaque. Carswell was chosen from 138 Air Force installations in the USAF competition.

The fire prevention awards are made each year by the National Fire Protection Association based on merit, originality, effectiveness of year-round fire prevention programs, and fire prevention promotional activities.

Service Directors Meet

A world-wide Air Force Command Service Club Directors' Conference will be held at Ent AFB, Colo., 20-23 Sept. Personnel Services' officers of major commands also will be invited.

30th ATS Conducts Hot Meal Service Tests

A six-month experiment is being conducted by the 30th Air Transport Squadron at Westover AFB, Mass., to determine the practicability of serving heated, pre-cooked frozen meals on all MATS passenger flights.

If successful, the hot meals will replace the in-flight box lunches which have been standard for many years. According to The Airliner, MATS' Atlantic Division official newspaper, one ATLD Materiel official said it was "safe to assume" the Air Force would approve the hot meals on a continuing basis after the current test period is over.

The experiment is now being conducted on flights from Washington, D. C., to Rhein-Main, Germany. The 1600th Air Transport Group at Westover AFB, Mass., is monitoring the results of the experiment.

Out of Step. It would be difficult, indeed, to find a viewpoint more out of step with the defense needs of the nation than the report of the Hoover Commission on Transportation, released this week.

The Commission's principal shortcoming is that it has no one, either on its so-called Task Force or on the Commission itself, who represents the Defense Forces or their viewpoint. In fact, the Task Force and the Commission is loaded with representatives of what it calls, in its own words, "traffic-hungry" private facilities, which would profit from a cessation of defense training operations.

As in its earlier report on the military medical services, the Commission shows a pointed disregard of the morale of Service personnel. It wants to reduce the already miserly six-cents per mile travel pay on which most Service families now suffer considerable loss on change of station. It wants to prohibit shipment of personal automobiles overseas and force families to rent vehicles from private firms. It wants to stop the crating of children's "junk" tricycles overseas. It criticizes sharply the system by which enlisted men going home on hardship cases may fill empty spaces on aircraft as "hitch-hikers."

From a strictly military standpoint, the report shows a disregard of defense needs in its recommendations that the activities of the Military Air Transport Service and the Military Sea Transport Service be curtailed further and the business given to commercial transportation firms. It gives no consideration to the fact that these organizations are performing military duties in peacetime training for war-time functions.

The report makes fine fodder for the daily press when it points out that the military services spend money to crate "10-cent store lamps" for shipment overseas. What it does not point out is that these "10-cent store lamps" are sorely needed by service families overseas who can not afford any better. Apparently the Commission has not had the benefit of an inspection trip to Service living quarters in such localities as France, England, Africa, Japan and other locales where American wives are trying to maintain some semblance of family life in tents, hutments, pre-fabs and trailers.

In the matter of mileage allowances, the report charges that Service personnel "pinch on meals, sleep in terminals, and cadge on the gullible public" to save money on their 6-cent per mile rate. Perhaps there are some who are able to come within their allowances by these means, but there are many more who are unable to make a change of station without going into debt.

MATS and MSTs admittedly perform functions which could be farmed out to commercial firms. But what the Hoover Commission ignores is that both of these agencies are training for duties they would have to perform in war. In fact, MATS is an M-Day agency which would work with the Strategic Air Command in shifting the bases of operation from one area of the world to another. Both MATS and MSTs are vital parts of the vast logistic system we would need if another world war should break out. They would, of course, be supplemented by private firms, but their experience and know-how would be the basis on which the entire system would operate. That they can get this experience and training in peace time should be a source of satisfaction and not a subject of criticism.

Congress, which has just shown its concern in Service morale by enacting the pay-readjustment act, will not, we hope, endanger Service morale by giving this report serious consideration.

NACA's 40 Years. The National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics will mark its 40th anniversary on Thursday 14 April. Those four decades have seen the airplane progress from what was virtually a novelty to the super-sonic weapon of today. In that progress the NACA has played a most important part.

Every airplane flying today owes something to the research of the NACA. The simple engine cowl by which the power plant is streamlined into the wing structure is the result of studies conducted by the NACA. In fact, it was this advance which won the Collier Trophy for the Committee. In the 1930's the NACA developed more than a hundred different sections or airfoils. The "two-thirty" series of wings were among the most successful and became the most widely used wing sections in the world.

Today the NACA is engaged in work which will be reflected in the aircraft of tomorrow — both commercial and military. What is commonplace in NACA's laboratories today will be the "miracles" of tomorrow's air age. NACA's problem, like all of research, is money. It is always difficult to convince Congress that the laboratory of today is the breeding ground of tomorrow's progress.

(Letters to the Editor must have author's name and address, but name will be omitted on publication if writer so states. Longer letters may be extracted for publication.)

More, Not Less, PIOs

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

With reference to THE JOURNAL's comments on the recent reduction of public information personnel and the ordering of civilians into top PI jobs, I wish to add my feeble voice in support of the extremely valid observations. (MEMO FOR JOURNAL READERS, 2 April 1955.)

I maintain that the answer to Mr. Wilson's problem is not in the action he took. Quite the reverse action seems to me to be more appropriate.

The Services need more, not less, qualified public information specialists in uniform. The Services need a better chance to keep the public informed with increased budgets and increased activity in this field of education. (I say education because public relations and public information is actually an educational device necessary and vital to the average citizen in our democratic way-of-life.)

As a professional public relations and advertising executive in civilian life, I am continually amazed at the illogical approaches made by responsible officials toward untangling knotty public relations and information problems. They get the cart before the horse.

There's hardly a successful businessman who would reduce his advertising staff and budget in the face of a falling sales graph any more than would a responsible general send half of his troops to leave in the face of any enemy build-up to his front. Yet there seems to be those who believe such a ridiculous formula would work for the Services; that military information staffs and budgets can be cut in the face of public misunderstanding, apathy and, for that matter, a veritable "enemy build up" to our front.

A businessman knows that, in order to talk intelligently about his goods or services, his advertising and public relations staffs must know their "product." Apparently there are those who believe just anyone can handle military information.

There are other qualities a businessman looks for in his public relations and advertising staffs; loyalty, ambition, stability, a desire for self-improvement, to name a few. These qualities do not seem to be important to the Services, apparently, though the importance of the public information mission is none the less.

The high rate of resignations from the Service academies, the low rate of reenlistment and the descending attractiveness of Service careers, etc., has brought cries of alarm from lawmakers and other officials. They were shocked to hear that the average American, or a large segment of the public, never heard of Matsuo and Quemoy and that their state had a military district. To fill this vacuum they cut public information staffs and budgets.

It seems reasonable that all the current trouble could have been avoided if, as THE JOURNAL pointed out, "top Defense officials, returning from important visits overseas" had been given the chance "to meet with Pentagon reporters at open conferences" instead of at "informal" sessions outside the Pentagon, involving newsmen less familiar with specialized military problems and jargon."

There is a clear indication that the American Public needs more, not less, accurate information.

Above everything else, the American public deserves accurate information. Goodness knows the public has a pretty difficult time trying to make up its mind about ordinary domestic problems without adding to the confusion by offering it a series of mis-quotes, misinterpretations, retractions, apologies and lengthy explanations, concerning our military forces, preparations and future.

It seems reasonable that a responsible person, realizing what was happening and wishing to prevent further misunderstanding, would do what most successful businessmen would do: increase his advertising and public relations staffs and budgets to cope with what he felt was a weak spot in his organization.

Increased quality and quantity of Armed Forces' information personnel would not solve all the problems, but it would be safe to say that such an increase would be a substantial factor in regaining and maintaining for the Services a dynamic public understanding and support.

"Differential Pay"

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Past issues have at times noted suggested titles for pay and allowances, etc., and now that the submitted list appears to have narrowed down recently, may I suggest that the following may be appropriate?

Differential Service Pay

Military Differential Pay

The term "differential pay" is used by several large corporations and I believe it can be equally applied to the Military.

Reds Seen As Not Bluffing in Build-up Of Resources Along China Coastal Area

THE Far East policy announced by President Eisenhower in January and promptly supported in Congress, assuring protection of Formosa and the Pescadores and "related" positions against Red aggression, still stands, but the exact form which its implementation will take is as unrevealed as it was ten weeks ago.

American intentions regarding Matsu and Quemoy remain purposely undefined, but there is a time beyond which they cannot remain unstated. That time will be determined, it is likely, not by us but by the Chinese, precisely as the aggressors of the past have done the determining.

These weeks are marked by a steady building up of Chinese resources for attack on the two island groups, and by continuing assurance from the Reds themselves that they are heading toward the "liberation" not only of the coastal island groups but of Formosa and the Pescadores as well. The complacent view that the Reds are bluffing in this is ill-advised.

THE RED BUILD-UP referred to is visible, real, and militarily sound. It has ground, sea, and air aspects. On the shores of the nearby mainland, battery positions have been put in and roads to connect them, looking toward the supplying, when ready, of continuous bombardment of the Nationalists' positions. The little airfields built by the Japanese or by Chiang's own people years ago are being improved for jet operation.

The fact that no large elements of either ground or air forces have yet appeared on the scene is not important; they would be useless until the area is ready for them, with guns placed and ammunition dumps filled and jet-fuel stocked. When the time is ripe they can come in fast enough. Similarly the patrol boats—no longer annoyed by Chiang's forces since the voluntary evacuation of the Tachens or on Nanchishan—can be brought down to the Quemoy neighborhood quickly enough when needed.

It is apparent that no assault on the Matsu group would rationally be undertaken until these ground, sea, and air resources are in working order, and, in fact, until they will have been in moderate operation. That is, preliminary artillery and aerial bombardment would normally be used for a time, just as the patrol boats would operate for a time to establish an effective blockade of the Matsu-Formosa sea-route. It is through the feeling-out of that period that the Chinese normally would come to their own decision on what they next can do safely.

Meantime, again in typical Red fashion, the political and psychological campaign proceeds without interruption, and it is an optimistic person who thinks that the West has fared as well in that very real form of warfare. We now have seen our most reliable allies falling away from us on the matter of defending Matsu and Quemoy by force, and supposed neutrals taking a position of complete hostility. The United States still has a great deal to learn about the role which politics, psychology, and economics play in the setting up of conditions which influence war; the Reds have beaten us at it, time and time again, and the coming weeks will disclose the extent to which they have done it once more in the Formosa straits.

THE FAR EAST PICTURE is not conspicuously brighter elsewhere. The Vietnam premier, apparently encouraged by American advisers, has made a bold attempt to discipline the rebellious sect-armies which the French have long tolerated. It is a test of strength which is still undecided, and is likely to remain so for a time. At this distance it would appear that the premier's boldness is justified, on the ground that while the sectarian armies remain independent they are worse than useless to a young central government struggling for unity. The ultimate test of a program is plain: is it successful?

JAPAN'S NEW HATOYAMA GOVERNMENT finds itself in the difficulties which await the statesmen who promise too much to too many people. Mr. Hatoyama is not the first to encounter that trouble. His Foreign Minister, Mr. Shigemitsu, amplified it by an impulsive decision to visit Washington for conference with Secretary Dulles before he had been invited. The issues which Mr. Shigemitsu is eager to discuss are solid issues, but a little timely thinking should have developed a realization that the first discussion of them should have been with America's representatives in Tokyo. His failure to foresee the inevitable position which Secretary Dulles would take, plus the reckless prematureness with which the unborn visit to Washington was announced, seem to assure embarrassment to the Hatoyama government at the reopening of the Diet on 15 April.

Embarrassment is serious this time because the incident is likely to strengthen splits on several issues, both domestic and foreign. The manifest difference with the United States, about the responsibility which we feel Japan itself must take in defense matters, is related to the enduring economic problem which sorely troubles Japan as a whole.

TWO MEMORIES OF 1945 continue to haunt the observer: (1) the nationwide and practically worldwide happiness over Japan's post-war reform which promised the end of militarism, and (2) the determination with which the victors put an end to Japan's pre-war co-prosperity trade concept for East Asia. There has been a considerable change of thinking in both those realms.

The fact is that both matters must be honestly faced. Years ago our first post-war trade mission came back with assurance that some way must be found to promote Japan's trade with the Asian continent; since that time the declaration has been repeated, and the need has become greater rather than less, but an accepted remedy still eludes us. And events in Korea and Indo-China and the coastal islands of late have grievously shaken our other 1945 views, about the desirability of complete pacifism in Japan. We are just beginning our reappraisals.

Nuclear Problems Force Curriculum Changes—Look-Ahead Thinking At Schools

STRATEGY implications of multipurposed new atomic weapons and expanding use of guided missiles, against the background of a fast-shifting international scene, will result in significant curriculum changes and impose greater demands for look-ahead thinking from officers at top Service schools.

Because the major "training aid" at these institutions—the library—frequently will lack answers to vital problems, there will be a greater premium on original thinking from students, and less relative emphasis on historical research.

That's the picture at the Army War College, Carlisle Barracks, Pa., where a JOURNAL representative visited last week. The situation there is believed typical of the trend at other senior Service schools, such as the Naval War College at Newport, R.I., and the Air War College, Maxwell AFB, Ala.

IN THE PAST, instructors and students had to concern themselves primarily with conventional weapons. During the last several years, problems there were formulated and solved on an "either or" atomic proposition—either with or without all-out use of nuclear weapons.

Now, it's getting even more complicated. Curricula must be revised to take into consideration possible use of so-called "precision" atomic weapons and related forces designed for specific jobs short of all-out war, employing limited use of small, tactical atomic weapons.

Although sessions were held behind closed doors, there is reason to believe that such new complexities in planning for the nation's defenses were surveyed during last week's first annual National Strategy Seminar at the Army War College.

This meeting, from 29-31 March, brought together top civilian and military leaders of the government, and notables from the fields of industry, state and municipal governments and education to meet with the 200 student officers at the College.

Their purpose? not to come up with specific answers, but to exchange ideas on the manifold problems involved in making national strategy and to develop an understanding of how these issues are handled from varied points of view.

SUMMING UP the National Strategy Seminar, Lt. Gen. Floyd L. Parks, USA, Second Army Commander, told reporters:

"Civilian and military visitors have given the Army and the College a great wealth of their philosophy and experience to stimulate and complement our current thinking on strategy. I can say with all sincerity that the country, as a whole, has benefited through the knowledge and wisdom that has been disseminated here.

"On the military side, we in the Army, have been stimulated by new and vigorous ideas advanced by our civilian colleagues. And our distinguished associates, I believe, now have a clearer understanding of the vast magnitude of the problems of national security and the lead time involved in solving them.

"I think I may speak for the entire group when I say that throughout this entire conference we all felt deeply the growing importance of science in our fast changing world. We found that, although much has been accomplished in the field of strategy, there is still much that remains to be done. We must intensify our studies, broaden them and dig even deeper if we are to successfully maintain security and preserve individual liberty and freedom of our nation."

Reporters at Carlisle for the wind-up of the Strategy Seminar were briefed on the Army War College by Col. J. A. Berry, jr., USA, ARWC Secretary.

Pointing out that the College was at the pinnacle of the Army School System, Colonel Berry related that beginning with the August 1955 class, officers must have between 15-25 years of service for admittance. This compares with the present 13-21 year limitation. They must also be under 46 years of age.

THE PRESENT CLASS, whose curriculum is outlined in the chart above, includes 70 per cent colonels and 30 per cent lieutenant colonels, with an average age of 40.8 years and an average of 15.14 years of service.

The average U.S. Military Academy graduate in the current class has 16.4 years service. Of the 176 Regular Army officers in attendance, 76 are West Point graduates.

About 85 per cent of the students have received college graduates, while

MEMO For Journal Readers

THE LUDICROUS PUBINFO SITUATION resulting from SecDef Wilson's rapid-fire directive last week relating to restrictions on release of information was pointed up this week when The Journal asked for a Marine Corps obituary in the joint Defense Department press room. The obituary was made available through channels, but with a cover sheet, signed "by direction" by Capt. F. G. Selby, USN, a top Navy PubInfo officer. The cover sheet assured that the information had been submitted for "review and clearance" in accordance with paragraph III of DOD Directive 5320.9, dated 29 March.

THAT PARAGRAPH STATES in part that information made available for publication should "constitute a constructive contribution to the primary mission of the Department of Defense." The obituary data qualified.

THERE'S LITTLE QUESTION among old hands in the Pentagon press corps that present stringent rules and their "letter of the law" interpretation will be relaxed. Meantime, however, effective PubInfo procedures and mutually beneficial relationships between newsmen and Service PIO's throughout the Armed Forces are being jeopardized.

IT'S INEVITABLE that with free flow of information at least temporarily blocked by Mr. Wilson's action and its strict interpretation, the Services can look forward to some adverse stories. These will hurt not only the Services, but more importantly the public's appreciation and confidence in a defense program that costs $34 billion per year and involves over 3 million men and women in uniform.

ENOUGH IS ENOUGH. The directives should be revised, or the Services should be given liberalized guidelines. The obituary information points the need for review.

AT LEAST ONE of the Uniformed Services will retain a military officer as PubInfo Chief. Although SecDef Wilson has told the Service Secretaries to replace military men with civilians in the top PIO job in the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps, he does not control the Coast Guard. That Service, operating under the Treasury, is expected to keep a four-striper in the billet, unless Sec'y. Humphrey plays follow-the-leader with the SecDef's order.

THE ARMY'S FAILURE to identify the division which the 3d Armored, now at Ft. Knox, Ky., will replace in Europe next year has created speculation that one of the infantry divisions now with the Seventh Army in Germany will be deactivated. The Army must lose a division in cutting back to the 18 division strength projected for FY '56.

AIR FORCE SPEECHMAKERS have been told to avoid alluding only to one command in public addresses. A new Information Services Letter says: "Names and numerical designations of AF commands may change, but there will always be a USAF. Identify yourself, therefore, as a member of AF, and then explain what part your command and assignment play in AF structure. AF as a team is a theme which should be woven throughout the fabric of all speeches and writings by AF members."

ENLISTED MEN at the Army's Ft. Dix, N. J., have organized a Reserve Officers Assn. Chapter. The members hold Reserve commissions. M/Sgt. (Maj.) C. R. Beahm, jr., is president; M/Sgt. (Col.) R. W. Morris is legislative chairman.

THE DEFENSE DEPT. has yet to endorse or reject a proposal by AF Sec'y. Talbott which would result in legislation to provide cash awards for Servicemen who make beneficial suggestions. The AF thinks the plan could result in savings worth millions of dollars.

ON HIS OWN. Gen. LeMay has started a cash reward program in SAC, using non-appropriated funds. If the Pentagon declines to ask Congress for permission to use appropriated funds, as is the case with suggestions from the Government's civilian employees, other commands undoubtedly will follow SAC's approach.

ALSO UNDER STUDY at the Pentagon are recommendations from current Service career attractiveness surveys asking that the present 60-day limitation on leave accrual be eliminated or raised. Chances for the adoption of this proposal are not seen bright, notwithstanding the fact that many in uniform are losing out on leave benefits.

ATHLETIC COACHES at West Point and Annapolis will be elated by new changes in height regulations. The Navy has O.K.'d a boost from 76 to 78 inches in the ceiling limitation on midshipmen; USMA officials have asked and will get a similar two-inch increase. Air Force officials, however, say that the third Service Academy will have a 76-inch limitation.

FOOTBALL AND BASKETBALL TEAMS at West Point and Annapolis have been handicapped in the past by the height restriction. There have been reported cases, however, where Service Academy basketball squads included stars who were taller than 6'4"; explanation was that these men had grown considerably since their entrance.

OUTSTANDING PERFORMANCE which won them "spot" promotions as B-36 and B-47 lead crews ironically will cost some SAC officers demotions in the near future. The reason for this is that Gen. LeMay insists the "spot" rank boosts be held only by crews who have been together for a prescribed time and have demonstrated outstanding proficiency, individually and as a crew, in the aircraft to which they are assigned.

IN THE CHANGE-OVER to B-52's, some lead crews will be broken up and it will take time for present B-36 "spot" holders to demonstrate similar capability in the new aircraft. SAC Chief LeMay makes no compromise in this area; the fact that one crack crewman came down with polio and had to be replaced did not relax the rule. All other crew members also lost their advanced rank, because of the required addition of a new crew member.

MAJOR COMMANDS in all the Services are envious of Gen. LeMay's authority to make "spot" promotions. There's no doubt it gives his crewmen a tremendous incentive advantage—particularly since the higher rank can be taken away at any time.

WHATEVER THE OTHER BENEFITS—and they will be many—from the forthcoming surprise test alert for the National Guard, "Operation Minuteman," will give the Guard a big public relations lift. During recent months, there's been much talk about the Reserve Forces and the relative state of readiness of various components. By this test, Guard officials hope to demonstrate that theirs is an outfit that is ready to go—right now—in event of emergency.

How to ADD INCOME FOR RETIREMENT

With the purchasing power of the dollar at about half what it was ten years ago, it is reasonable to assume that the dollar you save today may have value fluctuations in the future.

Many civilian and service personnel are preparing for extra retirement income to help compensate for a possible decline in dollar purchasing power through the regular purchase of Mutual Fund shares . . . Funds comprised of dividend paying securities. And doing it out of current earnings.

As our company has counseled thousands of civilians and service personnel, we are well aware of the important problem of supplementing fixed-dollar savings for extra retirement income. Let us help you get started on the way to a more sound financial future. For complete information, just mail a postcard with your name and address for our free booklet, "The Modern Way to Invest."

Bendix* Liquid Oxygen Systems breathing and atmospheric pressure

OUR military fliers want every foot of altitude they can get for one reason only—the man on top has a better chance to win the battle. So we are now engaged in an intense struggle building planes that can fly higher and life-sustaining apparatus which permits men to invade the completely alien World of the High Sky.

Up there fearsome and terrible things can happen!

Here on good old Mother Earth our bodies are accustomed to great pressure from the weight of the vast sea of gases above us. So sensitive are we to any change in altitude that even a ride in an office building elevator sometimes makes our ears pop.

You can well imagine what the problem is at 70,000 feet and higher where our latest rocket planes fly.

First we have to make oxygen gas. There's not enough room any more in military planes to carry bulky gaseous oxygen tanks. The new Bendix Liquid Oxygen System makes large quantities of this vital gas from a small container of liquid oxygen. It saves much space and weighs far less.

Next we have to regulate the flow—see that the man gets it in just the right amounts because too much is as bad as too little and his requirements change as he goes up.

Now the going gets rougher. Even though you are giving him pure oxygen, a man isn't physically able, at extreme altitudes, to gulp in all he needs. So this Bendix System has to pressure pump oxygen at the correct pressure into his lungs and through the membranes into the blood stream. At the same time, to keep him from literally blowing up, it applies equal

OK Taking Aliens in Regular Army, Select Only 886 in 4½ Years

The Senate Armed Services Committee has approved legislation which permits the Army to continue enlisting aliens to its regular ranks. Present law, which sets a ceiling of 12,500 on the number of aliens to be enlisted under the program, expires on 30 June of this year. The measure would extend the expiration date to 30 June 1957.

Considering the fact that the Army has enlisted only 866 persons under the law since it was enacted four and one-half years ago, the Committee said "it might be argued that the program has not been successful." The Committee report states, "However, Army witnesses pointed out that from the inception of the program the primary emphasis has been on quality and special ability rather than numbers."

Personnel obtained under the program were carefully screened not only for security but also for potential officer and NCO qualities. In securing the 866 alien enlistees, the Army received and screened 8,718 applications.

Secretary of the Army Robert T. Stevens said extension of the law "is desirable because it enables the Army to secure certain skilled personnel with special knowledge to fill positions for which citizen soldiers are not normally available."

Army Promotes 57 To Temporary Col.

APPROVE KOREAN POW LEAVE CREDIT

The Senate Armed Services Committee has approved legislation which provides that leave accrued by Servicemen while they were prisoners in Korea shall not be counted in determining the maximum amount of leave they may accumulate.

A similar measure was passed by the Senate last year but was not acted upon by the House.

At present, under the Armed Forces Leave Act, Service personnel are limited to a maximum of 60 days' leave which they may accumulate or have to their credit. The restriction has worked to the disadvantage of Korean POWs, who, had they not been in a prisoner-of-war status, would have been able to take their leave before it was lost due to operation of the law.

The Senate bill, sponsored by Republican Senators Frederick G. Payne and Margaret Chase Smith of Maine, corrects the situation by providing that leave accrued by members of the Armed Forces while held as POWs at any time during the period 27 June 1950 and ending 27 July 1953, shall not be counted in computing the maximum amount of leave which they may accumulate or have to their credit.

The bill also authorizes cash settlement for the total amount of leave accumulated, without regard to the 60-day maximum. It would cost about one million dollars.

A Committee amendment denies the benefits of the bill to persons who at any time may have refused to accept an opportunity to be repatriated.

defense ON CAPITOL HILL

A NEW FRINGE BENEFIT for members of the Armed Services has been suggested by Senator Barry Goldwater (R-Ariz). During Senate debate on the pay bill, Senator Goldwater pointed out that the uniform is not always "held in proper respect" during times of peace. He said "Proper respect for the uniform is a fringe benefit which can be given the men without costing the Government a nickel."

INADEQUATE HOUSING for military families was attacked by Senator Margaret Chase Smith (R-Me). "I regret to say," she told the Senate, "that the housing conditions of our military personnel, both in this country and at our establishments overseas, border on being a national disgrace. Too many of our personnel are forced to live in mere hovels—in literally firetraps—because of lack of housing." She added that she hopes "in the near future the Senate will act promptly on correcting the inadequate military-housing situation."

LATEST ATTACK on Navy aircraft carriers was launched by Representative Robert T. Ashmore (D-SC). Checking a recent newstory for accuracy, he said "I found that each carrier needs about 70 planes for purely defensive reasons. Seventy defensive fighters for each of 17 attack carriers makes a total of 1,190. I also found that the Air Force has been authorized 34 air defense wings by 1957. Each of these wings will have 75 fighters assigned. Thus, the Air Force will have only 1,275 fighters to protect half of the United States." Mr. Ashmore added, "They tell us that carriers are not vulnerable. But these 17 carriers will need as many fighter aircraft for protection as we are allocating for the protection of our great cities such as Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Chicago, St. Louis, Washington, D. C., New Orleans, Birmingham and Miami."

NEED TO RESTORE CUTS IN ARMY MANPOWER was voiced by Chairman Olin E. Teague (D-Tex) of the House Committee on Veterans Affairs. He criticized the "New Look" and the "mysterious formula" which was supposed to have provided "more defense and security for less money." He said cuts in the AF budget for fiscal '54 were restored for fiscal '55 "but not so with the Army. The funds provided for the Department of the Army have not been adequate in spite of the fact that we may have to deal with a massive enemy army well equipped and well supplied with manpower from satellite countries."

AN INVESTIGATION OF AIR FORCE procurement of rocket launchers will be launched next week by the House Armed Services Special Investigating Subcommittee. Chairman F. Edward Hebert (D-La) wants to find out why the AF is paying more money for rocket launchers than the Navy when both Services buy the same type.

AIRCRAFT PROCUREMENT may be one of the first areas investigated by the newly re-established Senate "watchdog" Committee. Headed by Senator Lyndon Johnson (D-Tex), Senate majority leader, the Preparedness Subcommittee of the Armed Services Committee, may also take a look at Service housing and military air passenger transportation. Funds to carry out the work of the group during the next 10 months are set at $160,000. Members of the Subcommittee, in addition to Senator Johnson, are Senators Kefauver, Stennis, Symington, Saltonstall, Bridges and Flanders.

MARINES WHO PARTICIPATED in the Iwo Jima flag raising would be honored by legislation introduced in the House by Republican Representatives Pillion and Radwan of New York. Both Congressmen have submitted bills which direct the Secretary of Interior to establish and maintain a suitable location near the new Marine Corps War Memorial at the northern end of the Arlington National Cemetery where the men portrayed in the memorial may be buried.

UPKEEP EXPENSES are not as great for enlisted WAFs as for airmen. Statistics released by the Air Force to the Senate Armed Services Committee show that the average four-year cost for an airman is $14,760, compared with $14,580—$180 less—for the enlisted WAF. Basic indoctrination training costs, during the first year, are $125 more for the airman than for the WAF, but it costs $25 more to give the lady basic technical training, and the AF shells out $25 more to each WAF for initial clothing allowances. The WAF saves the AF money on courts-martial costs, though. The average yearly cost of courts-martial proceedings for airmen is $30. For the ladies it is $00.

THE MILITARY PHILOSOPHY OF LOGISTICS CONTROL is out-dated according to the Hoover Commission. In its latest report to the Congress, the Commission says military officers "have been schooled from their early days in each Service that the military commander must have absolute control of his supply line. Out of this arises the desire of the military to keep separate Service control of their respective supply lines and separation of control between the three Services." However, maintenance of separate supply lines is "contrary to the principles of integration," the Commission states, and "contrary to the principles of good business management" used in industry. "These ideas of the necessity of separate service belong to a period when the tonnage of required military supplies was measured in thousands and the items in hundreds of thousands, instead of millions of tons and millions of items as today."

ANOTHER HOOVER COMMISSION

REPORT of interest to the Services is due out shortly. It will cover the business organization of the Department of Defense and will detail the Commission's recommendations with regard to rotation of military officers into civilian-type activities.

ROTC Cadet Cols. Confer

■ UNIVERSITY PARK, PA. The Cadet Colonels' Conference for all AFROTC units in Area C was held at The Pennsylvania State University late last month. This Conference was the first of its kind to be held in the AFROTC Program.

Primary purpose was to discuss possible improvement of the AFROTC Program through Cadet participation. Since a major portion of Corps activities are planned and implemented by the Advance Cadets, they are in a most advantageous position to evaluate the program, identify problem areas, and recommend improvements. Also, by operating their own activities, the Cadets will become better trained to shoulder the responsibilities of staff and command that will face them when they become Air Force officers.

The operation and planning of the Conference was done almost entirely by Advanced Cadets from Penn State, Cadets Barrington Drew, Richard Gedmark, Dave Heistand, and Carl Meixsell.

Col. Daniel F. Riva, USAF, Professor of Air Science, opened the Conference with an address.

Cadet Colonels from nineteen Colleges and Universities attended the Conference. An Air Force C-47, which was piloted by officers of the Penn State AFROTC Detachment, transported the visiting Cadets to and from State College. The Cadets were picked up and returned to central collecting points in Pennsylvania, Virginia, and North Carolina.

Gen. Chidlaw Says AF Wife Holds Key To Morale, Stresses Information Need

The basic responsibility for the morale of the Air Force officer falls upon his wife, General Benjamin W. Chidlaw, USAF, told members of the Ent AFB, Colo., Officers' Wives' Club last week.

The commander-in-chief of the Continental Air Defense Command said that "most of our officers are married—and have a 'morale staff section of their own.'"

"We aren't sufficiently unsophisticated or naive to believe that anything we do—or fail to do—is going to have nearly so much effect as the greeting the officer gets from his wife when he walks in the door in the evening," he said.

Calling his audience the most important he has spoken to in the past two years, General Chidlaw told the wives of CONAD officers there was very little the Air Force could do to bolster their morale except "to explain what our job is and why it is necessary—and to let you know how much we appreciate your part in getting the job done."

The General said he thinks it "particularly important that we in the Armed Forces know why, at a time when the economy of our country should be devoted to peace, so much of our national budget must be spent in preparation for military defense."

"While there are many facets of our business, security matters for example, which we must leave at the office, nevertheless those of us in the Continental Air Defense Command—since we are more or less the front-line troops in this defense business—must be prepared to explain what that job is."

"And since our wives and families are and will be considered by many civilian neighbors to be experts on the subject, we must be doubly sure that they know what our job is," the General said.

RETIRED SERVICE NOTES

Tax Cut For Retired Personnel Under 65 Wins New Senate Support; Worth $240

A proposed tax credit worth up to $240 to retired military personnel under 65 has won the support of Chairman Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.) of the Senate Armed Services Committee.

In passing the new Internal Revenue Code last year, the Congress provided a tax credit equal to 20 per cent of retirement incomes up to $1200 for individuals 65 or over, and for those under 65 who receive pensions from a public-retirement system. However, military personnel were singled out for exclusion from the under-65 group.

Senator Russell says the resulting inequity "cries for justice," and he will undertake "to see that this injustice is eliminated."

The Chairman's remarks were made during Senate debate on the military pay bill when Senator Hubert Humphrey

(D-Minn.) announced he had prepared an amendment "which would give to retired service personnel the same sort of allowance and deduction in connection with their pension and retirement pay that any other employee of the Government... gets."

Senator Russell said acceptance of the amendment "would tie up" the pay raise legislation and prevent it from becoming effective on 1 April. He said he shares Senator Humphrey's views "that an injustice has been done to the retired military personnel by not allowing them the same exemptions as have been allowed in other fields," but he asked that action be deferred.

Senator Humphrey said he would not offer his amendment in view of Chairman Russell's "sound advice" but would present the proposal in a separate bill.

"I feel that, as we adjust pay schedules for military personnel, we ought to remove the rank discrimination in connection with retirement pay which exists in the present law," he said.

Senator Russell said, "I shall be glad to join the Senator at the first appropriate occasion, in undertaking to see that this injustice is eliminated."

Several bills already have been introduced in the House and Senate to correct the tax inequity.

One (HR 291) was introduced by Representative Daniel A. Reed (R-N. Y.), ranking Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee. He said he "can find no justification whatsoever for continuing this type of discrimination against individuals who have served in their country's uniform." His bill, he said, "simply removes the exclusion of the Armed Forces from the definition of public-retirement system."

Senator Humphrey said he has checked with the Treasury Department "and the situation appears to be the result of inadvertence on the part of Congress. It is not premeditated or planned."

Recalled to active duty, after ten years of retirement, Captain Carpenter served on the Naval Examining and Retirement Board, 1943-46.

He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Sybil Shugg, 24 Pine Terrace, W., Short Hills, N. J., and Mrs. A. D. Ayrault, 23 Forest Glen Lane, Tacoma, Wash., with whom he had made his home in recent years; two sons, Lt. Col. Donald N. Carpenter, USMC, and Dr. Cedric C. Carpenter of Summit, N. J.; 13 grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

Brig. Gen. Jesse F. Dyer, USMC-Ret.

Brig. Gen. Jesse F. Dyer, USMC-Ret., who won the Medal of Honor in the 1914 occupation of Vera Cruz, died of a cerebral hemorrhage on 31 March at the U. S. Naval Hospital, Corona, Calif. He was 77. He is survived by his widow, Nellie.

Burial was in a Naval Cemetery near San Diego, Calif.

The General won the Nation's highest honor on 21-22 April 1914, when a Marine and Naval landing force occupied Vera Cruz after the arrest of some American sailors touched off a crisis between the United States and Mexico. The citation accompanying the Medal of Honor states that (then Captain) Dyer "was in both days fighting at the head of his company, and was conspicuous in his conduct, leading his men with skill and courage."

During WWI, he served as Aide to the Governor of the Virgin Islands. Prior to his retirement in 1937, he saw duty in Haiti and in China.

He was advanced to the rank of brigadier general on the retired list in 1942, when Congress passed the law providing for advancement of retired officers who have been specially commended in combat.

INDUSTRY IN DEFENSE

AF To Use Plastic Droppable Fuel Tanks; Prevents Giving Aluminum To Enemy

The Air Force, which has been experimenting with plastic droppable fuel tanks for several years, has announced that production has begun on reinforced plastic tanks made by Molded Products Corp., Division of Admiral Corporation.

The Air Research and Development Command's Wright Air Development Center, Dayton, Ohio, announced that Molded Products was entering the production phase of a contract awarded it in June, 1952, by the Air Materiel Command. The contract calls for development of plastic tanks and eventual production.

The tanks developed under this contract have passed evaluation tests. Standardized at 225 gallons, they can be reduced to 200 gallons or increased to 250 gallons by shortening or lengthening the barrel, or center section, of the tank.

At the same time, WADC announced another research and development contract is in effect with Zenith Aircraft Division of Zenith Plastics Co. for a 450-gallon tank.

Decision to experiment with the expendable plastic tanks was dictated by two factors: (1) aluminum becomes a scarce commodity in war time, and (2) dropped aluminum tanks can be salvaged by the enemy and reused, whereas plastic tanks will smash on impact after drops from aircraft and cannot be salvaged.

During the Korean war, thousands of pounds of aluminum alloy were handed to the enemy when wing tanks were dropped over enemy lines.

Ultimately, the tanks are to be standardized and made interchangeable in line with the program now underway for aluminum tanks. Produced in separate pieces (nose, tail and center sections), the tanks would be packed compactly for shipping and be assembled in the field.

While this knockdown feature has been attained in aluminum, the state of the art in plastic tanks is not sufficiently advanced to permit this feature at this time. Present bonding agents have not been perfected to the point where assembling of plastic tanks is possible in the field.

Until such time as bonding can be accomplished with more certainty and the time of assembly is reduced, Molded Products will deliver its tanks assembled. Engineers expect that the answer to both of these problems may be solved by the development of a mechanical seal.

At present the plastic tanks are somewhat heavier than their aluminum counterparts. Molded Products have succeeded in holding the weight to 115 pounds for the 225-gallon tank as opposed to 99 pounds for the same size aluminum tank. The 450-gallon plastic tank is approximately 40 pounds heavier than the comparable aluminum tank. Engineers believe that with further development it will be possible to reduce the plastic tank weight to that comparable with aluminum.

Cost of plastic tanks is comparable with aluminum tanks. Molded Products' tanks cost approximately the same as their aluminum counterpart.

Development of the plastic wing tanks was undertaken by the U. S. Air Force in cooperation with the Canadian and British Air Forces. All three felt the need of substitute for aluminum and a material that, on falling into enemy hands, would not give aid and comfort to the enemy.

WADC Project Engineer on the plastic tanks is Joseph Sansone, assisted by Konstantine Economou and William Norris. The program is under the supervision of the Power Plant Laboratory's Tank Section, headed up by James H. Rodgers and Donald Lowe. Ray Kuhl is the project officer for AMC.

For a jet plane traveling at 600 mph, this would be guidance for a flight of five hours.

A plane 1000 miles from the station will receive information accurate to within 10 miles in any direction. Navarhe will direct a plane to a point 100 miles from its destination, where it can pick up short range radio signals as a guide for landing. If the experimental station is a success, a chain of similar installations will be set-up around the world.

Col. W. R. Fields Cited For Chest Drive Success

Col. William R. Fields, USA, has been presented an Infantry Center Certificate of Achievement for his work as chairman of the 1955 Ft. Benning, Ga., Community Chest drive.

Infantry Center Quartermaster, he was cited for raising $65,103.38, more than $15,000 over the goal.

The citation was signed by Maj. Gen. Joseph H. Harper, USA, Infantry Center Commander.

SEEK ARMY RESEARCH DIRECTOR

The Army is getting set to appoint an independent Director of Research and Development.

Acting Secretary of the Army Charles C. Finucane made the disclosure. He said, "We are presently looking for a top-level scientist to fill this position."

The new Director will report directly to the Army Secretary in line with recommendations made by members of the Congress and scientific organizations. Mr. Finucane said, "We feel that this step will help us to keep research and development where it belongs—in a position of the highest priority."

The Army R&D program, he added, "is being closely coordinated with the research and development work of the Navy and Air Force," and will be responsive to "actual needs of the Army" and not "dominated by purely logistical problems or other such considerations."

Secretary Finucane said changed methods of fighting "impose grave and urgent requirements on our Research and Development program. I cannot emphasize too strongly the continuing requirement for a vigorous Research and Development program if we are to maintain our ability to field an Army equipped to fight and inevitably win a war in this atomic age."

RAdm. Schoeffel, Former Ordnance Chief, Named Firm's Weapons Planning Chief

RAdm. Malcolm F. Schoeffel, USN-Ret., former chief of the Navy Department, Bureau of Ordnance, has joined General Precision Equipment Corporation as director of weapons planning, Hermann G. Place, president of GPE, announced today.

Admiral Schoeffel will make his headquarters in Washington, D. C.

Appointment of Admiral Schoeffel in 1950 as Ordnance Chief highlighted a 36 year career. During WWII, he commanded a light carrier in the famous Task Force 58 in the Far Pacific. After serving as Operations Officer to Fleet Admiral E. J. King, USN, Commander-in-Chief of the U. S. Fleet, he became Planning Officer for Admiral Nimitz, Commander-in-Chief of the Pacific Fleet. Following the war, Admiral Schoeffel served as Deputy Chief of Naval Ordnance, as Commander of a carrier division of the Atlantic Fleet and as Commander of the Naval Test Center at Patuxent, Md.

General Precision Equipment Corporation is a management company with 20 subsidiaries, whose principal activity is the design and production of a wide range of high-precision instruments, components and systems for industry and defense. GPE products are used by the Armed Forces for fire control, bombing, automatic navigation and training, and for the guidance, control and simulation of aircraft and missiles.

Ordnance Group Visits ACF 8-Inch Shell Line

Top-ranking Ordnance Corps officers and officials recently visited the ACF Industries plants at Berwick and Milton, Pa., to inspect the eight-inch shell lines, produced under contract administered by the Philadelphia Ordnance District.

Members of the group, led by Brig. Gen. R. G. Butler, Commanding General of the Ordnance Ammunition Command, Joliet, Ill., included:

F. H. Engleke and R. W. Cuthill, Office, Chief of Ordnance, Washington, D. C.; 1st Lt. Roy Williams, aide to General Butler; Col. D. W. Allison, Chief, Procurement Division, OAC; Col. W. S. Blodgett, OAC; Col. John G. Zierdt, Chief, Ammunition Branch, OCO; Lt. Col. R. S. Crossman, Chief, Industrial Division, Philadelphia Ordnance District; A. L. Sevison, Officer-in-Charge, Scranton Ordnance, POD; R. J. Murray and H. J. Babcock, Frankford Arsenal, Philadelphia.

Wind Tunnel Equipment Ordered By AF, Navy

The Air Force and the Navy have ordered wind tunnel equipment valued at $1,300,000 from the Westinghouse Electric Corporation plant at Sunnyvale, Calif.

The orders include an auxiliary 12,000-horsepower compressor for the wind tunnel at the Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory, Inc., Buffalo, N. Y., which is part of a tunnel modernization program under sponsorship of the Air Force. The Air Force also ordered a fabricated steel stinging support for its wind tunnel in Tulsa, Tenn.

The Navy contracted for a compressor for its wind tunnel adjoining the David Taylor Model Basin in Carderock, Md. In 1945, Westinghouse, supplied two 1000-horsepower motors to drive water in an endless loop past model hulls being studied in the basin's miniature "ocean."

Name Smokeless Powder Expert To Def. Dept. Job

Henry N. Marsh, smokeless powder consultant to the Explosives Department of Hercules Powder Co., has been named Deputy to Assistant Secretary of the Army for Logistics and Research and Development Frank H. Higgins.

Mr. Marsh's recent work with Hercules has dealt with booster and propellant charges for guided missiles and rockets such as the Nike and Honest John. As General Chairman of the Technical Division and Committees of the American Ordnance Association, he has served as Ordnance consultant to the Armed Services.

For the past three years, Mr. Marsh has served as a member of the Technical Advisory Group to the Air Force Armor Center at Eglin AFB, Fla.

Col. Maples To USARPAC

Col. Frederick A. Maples, USA, has been relieved from duty with The Armored Center, Ft. Knox, Ky., as post quartermaster, and assigned to duty with the United States Army Pacific.

New ASPR Retains Delayed Profit Form

The new regulations for Part 4, Section III, Armed Services Procurement Regulations have been approved and are ready for printing. They are substantially the same as was submitted to industry for comment. Biggest disappointment to industry was the retention of the delayed profit formula of incentive type contracts.

The third revision of the new ASPR edition is for sale, 25 cents, by the Supt. of Documents, Government Printing Office, Wash. 25, D. C. It contains a number of minor, but important changes in Sections I, IV, VII, XII, and XIII. Most important are the new rules in Section XIII for liability for government owned property.

The revised ASPR plus the three revisions cost $3.30.

Seek Modifications In Renegotiation Act

Military contractors are hopeful for sympathetic hearings in the House Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee on the proposed bill for renegotiation of contracts.

Enthusiasm for passing retroactive legislation for the extension of the Renegotiation Act of 1951 has been dimmed with the collapse of the stock market probe.

Industry is hopeful that any law passed will contain modifying amendments. One suggestion is to increase exemptions to one million dollars of annual business, another is to permit as allowable costs all expenses that are deductible for tax purposes in the Internal Revenue Code.

'Copter Forum to Hear Foreign Operators

Helicopter operators and engineers from six foreign companies will join an outstanding group of American engineers in presenting technical papers at the Eleventh Annual Forum of the American Helicopter Society in Washington, D. C., 28-29 April.

Over 900 representatives of the helicopter industry, the military, and related fields, the largest attendance in history, are expected to attend.

An exhibit of products of helicopter manufacturers and sub-contractors will be on display during the Forum. Technical sessions will be divided into morning and afternoon programs on 28-29 April. All Forum events will be held within the Mayflower Hotel.

A helicopter display featuring most of the helicopters manufactured in this country is scheduled for the morning of 30 April at Anacostia Naval Air Station. Both the display and the exhibit rooms in the Mayflower will be open to the general public.

Coast Guard Develops Rescue Basket For Helicopter Pickups Of Survivors

The Coast Guard has revealed development of a metal rescue basket for use by helicopters in effecting sea-air pickups of survivors.

Invented by Capt. Frank A. Erickson, USCG-Ret., a pioneer in the helicopter field, the new rescue baskets are manufactured by the Coast Guard's Aircraft Repair and Supply Base, and are now in use at all air stations which operate hoist-equipped helicopters.

At present, Captain Erickson is affiliated with the Brantly Helicopter Corp., in Frederick, Okla., and is developing a stabilizer of his own invention. He formerly headed the Coast Guard's Rotary Wing Development Unit at Elizabeth City, N. C.

The new rescue device has been found to be more advantageous in the majority of cases, although there are some situations which call for use of the old-fashioned sling-rescue equipment. Specific examples of situations in which the new basket have been found to be more practical than the sling are:

When making a pickup from a ship or small vessel; when picking up an unconscious person or body from water; when the condition of the survivor indicates little or no self-help can be expected; and when injuries to a survivor might be aggravated if a sling or other methods were employed.

The following details the method of pickup making use of the metal rescue basket:

Upon approaching the survivor, the hoist operator fully extends the boom attached to the helicopter and lowers the basket about 15 feet below the plane. The pilot comes to a hover approximately 20 feet down wind from the survivor. The hoist operator lowers the basket into the water and lets out five or 10 feet of slack line and coaches the pilot into position. This permits the pilot to concentrate on maneuvering the aircraft with only an occasional glance backward at the survivor. The resistance of the water on the basket as it is towed causes it to heel so that the lower rail passes under the survivor while the upper rail prevents him from being washed through. A completely unconscious or helpless person can be picked up in this manner. A conscious survivor, however, can assist by holding onto the spreader bar.

As soon as the hoist operator sees the survivor in the basket, he directs the pilot to climb 10 or 15 feet directly over the survivor. A survivor will settle into the bottom of the basket as it clears the water. The hoist operator lifts the basket to the craft's doorway and turns the heavy end of the basket so that the survivor can be more easily transferred to the plane.

A "SURVIVOR" is hoisted aboard a helicopter in the recently developed Coast Guard metal rescue basket, following a pickup at sea. The Rescue baskets, invented by Capt. Frank G. Erickson, USCG-Ret., are now in use at all Coast Guard Air Stations which employ hoist-equipped rotor craft.

Such a procedure makes it unnecessary for a man to jump into the water to attach a sling to an unconscious survivor.

Coast Guard Headquarters also told THE JOURNAL that work is now being done on a variation of the present rescue basket. The modified, or paravanned basket, could be used to make rescues from sea to ship. It would also be of value in making transfers from ship to ship. Coast Guard officials also plan to meet with the British Mission in this country to discuss a recent British "net-scoop" rescue device. While it is felt that the British net device will prove "too unwieldy," and will not offer the advantages of the metal rescue basket, a meeting soon will be arranged on the chance that some new technique in life-saving will be learned.

U. S. COAST GUARD

Secretary of The Treasury—George M. Humphrey
Commandant—Vice Adm. Alfred C. Richmond

PROPOSED legislation calling for involuntary attrition of Coast Guard admirals and captains has been submitted to Congress by Treasury Secretary George C. Humphrey.

In submitting the proposal, now before the Senate Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, the Secretary pointed out that such action is necessary to prevent stagnation in all ranks and to provide an essential flow of promotion. He told the Committee that the present lack of timely advancements is adversely affecting the morale of younger officers, resulting in discontent, lack of incentive and reduced initiative.

Here is the way the proposed bill would operate:

Rear admirals with seven years' service in grade or a total of 35 years' commissioned service would be retired involuntarily.

For captains with at least eight years' service in grade or a total of 35 years in commissioned rank, a continuing system of selection would be established by holding annual retention boards. The boards would be convened to pick 75 per cent of the eligible captains for retention. The 25 per cent not selected for retention would be involuntarily retired from the Service.

The draft of the bill, however, contains provisions for retaining on active duty a required number of officers in each rank to meet the needs of the Coast Guard at any given time. The Commandant, the Assistant Commandant and the Engineer-in-Chief would not be affected by the legislation while serving in statutory posts.

At present, there are 15 admirals on active duty; the Commandant, a vice admiral, and two rear admirals holding statutory positions.

Along with the request for remedial legislation, the Secretary submitted figures which indicate present and future promotion prospects in the Coast Guard. A study of retirement expectations of admirals and captains, based on the assumption that all retirements will be made at the statutory age of 62, indicates that the last of the 15 admirals now on active duty would leave the Service in 1967. During the 13-year period, 1955-1967, the average attrition rate for rear admirals would come to about 1.2 each year.

The average age of admirals is 55; in 1961 the average admiral would have about 32 years' commissioned service.

Until recently, the average captain chosen for advancement to two-star rank was made in approximately his 30th year of commissioned service at about the age of 52.

If this trend continued, in 1961 the average captain could not expect to be advanced until his 34th year of commissioned service at the age of 56. In 1967, he would be 58 years old with 36 years of service before he was promoted to flag rank. At that time, the average admiral would have only about four years or less left to serve before he reached the statutory retirement age.

If Congress approves the Secretary's proposals, however, these results will be attained:

1. The rate of attrition in the rank of rear admiral will increase to about three each year;
2. The average age of all active duty admirals would remain constant at about the age of 54;
3. At any given time, the average admiral on active duty would have about 32½ years of total commissioned service;
4. The average captain could expect to be advanced in his 30th year of commissioned service at the age of 52;
5. The average captain would have at least five years in two-star rank before reaching the statutory retirement age.

Statistics for captains are based on the number 150, the figure called for in Coast Guard tables of organization.

On the other hand, if present conditions were permitted to continue unchecked, by 1959 there would be as many captains with 30 years' commissioned service as there would be captains with less than 30 years' commissioned service.

After 1963, all captains called for in tables of organization would have 30 years of commissioned service. This means, Secretary Humphrey said, that the average commander could not expect to be advanced until after his 32nd year of commissioned service at the age of 54.

The proposed legislation, if enacted by Congress, would mean that starting in 1963, there would be a constant ratio of about 30 captains with more than 30 years' commissioned service and about 120 with less than 30 years' service. This situation, the Treasury Chief states, "is a very desirable balance between the experience of maturity and the drive of the more youthful."

Almost immediately, the flow of advancements would permit the average qualified commander to attain the rank of captain in his 25th year of commissioned service at the age of 47.

All captains not picked for continued service would be retired involuntarily on the 30 June of the fiscal year a board failed to name them for retention.

Nuclear Progress Forces Curriculum Changes

9 per cent have attended college but were not graduated; 15 per cent have attended the Armed Forces Staff College at Norfolk, Va., prior to being chosen for the Army War College.

It was noted that 74 per cent of the Army members of the class have commanded battalions or higher, while 65 per cent have served at high staff level, such as the Department of the Army. More than half have been instructors at branch schools or higher educational facilities.

Outlining classroom work, which is highlighted by the "committee action" approach to specific problems with a free give-and-take of ideas, Colonel Berry said that in addition to these responsibilities, each student officer must prepare and present a paper during the period from September to March.

Although no fixed limit is set on this paper, the average report runs about 5000 words, with supporting bibliographical material and footnotes.

A number of the papers are suggested by the Advanced Planning Group at the College. Others are done at the request of the Department of the Army or Headquarters, Continental Army, Continental Command, Ft. Monroe, Va.

Other papers are suggested by the students themselves. All relate to matters which would be of concern at the Army Group level or above.

Acting Commandant of the ARWC is Brig. Gen. Thomas W. Dunn, USA, with Maj. Gen. Clyde D. Eddleman, USA, present commander of the 4th Infantry Division in Germany and a participant in the Strategy Seminar, due to take command this Spring.

The faculty board at Carlisle consists of Col. C. P. Bixel, D. P. Armstrong, O. B. Beasley, T. R. Stoughton and Colonel Berry.

The Joint Staff, which helps coordinate instruction, includes Mr. R. W. Byrd of the State Department, Capt. H. F. Eckberg, USN, and Col. D. D. Brannon, USAF.

Col. R. G. Stilwell, USA, is Director of Instruction.

As shown in the curriculum chart herewith; the course is divided into three major segments—National and International Affairs, the Army; and Strategy and War Planning. The class makes numerous field visits, including such places as the United Nations, major industrial installations, and field trips to Navy and Air Force facilities.

Col. Wright to 4th Army

Col. W. H. Sterling Wright, USA, Commander of the First Armored Division's Combat Command "B," Ft. Hood, Tex., has been assigned to Fourth Army headquarters at San Antonio, Tex., for duty with ROTC activities.

He will be replaced by Col. Jack A. Boulger, USA, who has been assigned at Ft. Hood since last year when he returned from a tour of duty with Headquarters, Army Forces, Far East. Colonel Wright commanded the Division Combat Command "C" prior to his assignment with CC "B."

Lt. Col. Brandt to FEC

Lt. Col. Charles J. Brandt, USA, Deputy Chief of Staff for Administration at Ft. Bliss, Tex., has been reassigned to the Far East Command for his fourth tour of overseas duty.

Colonel Brandt was Public Information Officer at Ft. Bliss for nearly three years prior to his assignment as Deputy Chief of Staff in November 1954. On a previous assignment to the post, he had served as Public Information Officer from 1946 to 1948.

Head OCAFF Officers' Mess

■ FT. MONROE, VA. Col. Thomas R. Yancey, newly-elected president of the Board of Governors for the Fort Monroe Officers' Open Mess, has announced the names of ten additional Field Forces and Post Officers elected to serve on the Board of Governors with him during the coming year. They are:

Col. Hal Hardenberg, Lt. Col. Marion B. Davis, Lt. Col. Francis L. Platt, Lt. Col. Sara L. Sturgis, Lt. Col. Lawrence Bowlby, Lt. Col. Edward Bautz, Jr., and Lt. Col. Walter A. Edens.

Surplus Career Field Reduced

Surplus AFSCs (Air Force Specialty Codes) have been reduced from a total of 46 to 26 in a revised current listing of career fields for airmen of less than seven skill level.

The revised list affects airmen on duty in the Z. I. only. Each organization's orderly room has the new list of skills now declared surplus. If an airman's skill is surplus and he is otherwise qualified, he may request assignment to the basic airman technical school of his choice, providing the course is not on the revised listing.
